Bellomo Tosses No Hitter

Kevin Bellomo of the WHWB Little League baseball team had a day that every baseball player dreams about Wednesday.

Bellomo pitched a no hitter for WHWB as it improved its record to 6-0 with a 7-0 win over Rotary. Bellomo struck out 18 in the six-inning game, but failed to record a perfect game as he walked four.

If his pitching antics weren't enough, Bellomo showed that he can also hit as he clouted a pair of homeruns. He belted a three-run shot in the first inning and added a solo blast in the third.

Rotary Hands Marble Loss

Marble Savings suffered its first loss of the year in Rutland Youth League baseball Wednesday as the Rotary Aces took a 3-2 victory.

Craig Dikeman pitched the win and drove in two runs with a triple for the winners. Dikeman also scored the deciding run when he scampered home on an error.

Larry Zukowski took the loss for Marble Savings, which was led at the plate by Scott Gero with a double and triple.

Downton A.C. Rolls

In Youth League baseball action Tuesday evening, Downton A.C. defeated Rutland Town, 11-8, at Dewey Field. John Hock was the winning pitcher, while Darryl Sharon picked up the loss.

RUTLAND KIWANIS CLUB

The Rutland Kiwanis Club, in conjunction with the Rutland Recreation Department, held the annual fishing derby at Combination Pond on June 27. Approximately 100 children and parents were there to observe the fun and frolic the children had catching the fish. Our young anglers caught approximately 32 trout and competed for prizes.

The first fish caught was by Mark Pratico. However, being just as competitive, his younger sister Krissy Pratico, 7, brought in a beautiful native trout. (See photo above.)

A total of 32 prizes were awarded to the winning entries. First place winners (tie) were Bill Phillips and Brian Hemptle.

Refreshments were supplied by the Rutland Kiwanis Club, which was Kentucky Fried Chicken and soft drinks, to all those who attended.

President Joel Mytych wishes to express special thanks to both Lindholm Sports for donation of a fishing pole and reel, as one of the prizes given, and to Bob Richardson and his fine staff for their help in judging and organizing this fishing derby.

Chairman Tony Abatiell informed us that next on our agenda, to take place on July 24 at Rutland High School, the Rutland Kiwanis Club will have a cook-out for the Rutland Kiwanis Little League. This time we will get a first-hand look at their new uniforms.

A reminder to all our Kiwanians, on Aug. 3 our dinner meeting will be at the Rutland Correctional Center at 5:30 p.m. sharp. We will be given a tour of the newly renovated center.

Bruce Lawler, returned from our national convention in New Orleans, gave us a very informative talk on what to expect from Kiwanians for the coming year.

Frank Altrui has contacted a manufacturer who has agreed to come to Rutland to give a demonstration of bullet-proof vests. The Rutland Kiwanis Club, is considering raising money for these bullet-proof vests for the Rutland Police Department. More information on this next week.

Tourney at Rotary

The Annual Frazier Indians Softball Tourney gets underway Saturday at 10 a.m. at Rutland's Rotary Field with Rutland's RAMS meeting Parking Lot of Barre at 10 a.m.

Eighth games are scheduled Saturday with the final contest starting at 8:30 p.m. Defending champion Ground Round, formerly known as Lang's, has a first-round bye and will meet the winner of the day's first game at 2:30 p.m.

Rutland's two other entries the Ice Cream Cones and Indians are slated for 11:30 a.m. and 1 p.m. action, respectively.

Superintendent Of Parks Sought

John W. Cioffredi, superintendent of the Recreation and Parks Department, said Monday that he is advertising for a recreation supervisor.

The position will become vacant when the present recreation supervisor, Robert Richardson, leaves his post in the middle of August.

The salary for the position starts at $238.79 a week, with a maximum of $283.65 a week.

Cioffredi said that, under his supervision, the new recreation supervisor will organize, promote, and implement a wide variety of recreational activities.

Cioffredi said that he is requiring that the new recreation supervisor have a four-year degree from a college in recreation or a related field. He said that this is important because the recreation supervisor "is not just a sports' position, but one involved with arts and crafts, administration.

Aldermen Institute New Sick, Vacation Time Policy for City

By PAUL TEETOR

The board of aldermen has instituted a new procedure to stop what one alderman called Wednesday "the raping of the city" by department heads who accumulate sick days and vacation time for a lump sum payment when they leave city hall. The procedure, which came out of the Aldermanic General Committee, consists of a form which all department heads are required to fill out and give to the personnel officer, Margaret Graves, whenever they are going to be absent from the office for sick leave or vacation.

"The way some of way these department heads have been getting away with murder on their sick and vacation leaves has got to be stopped right now," Alderman Nicholas M. Barone, who is also the vice-chairman of the general committee, said Wednesday night.

"Bob Broderick (former city attorney) took a lump sum of around $3,000 when he left city hall (April 6)," Barone said. "But there was no way of substantiating exactly what number of days he took off or what the city owed him."

Under the city charter, city hall employees are allowed to accumulate up to 120 days of combined sick and vacation leave.

"It's about time these department heads realized that if you want a sick day off, you have to lose a sick day off your accumulated list," Barone said. "These guys have really been raping the city."

However, all the department heads interviewed Wednesday insisted that they had been following proper reporting procedures all along.

City Attorney William J. Bloomer said that he always notifies the mayor and the personnel officer when he is going to be gone for more than a half day.

"I don't mind this new procedure, because I don't think it's a bad idea to have the department heads accountable to someone," Bloomer said.

Police Chief Charles R. Spoon said that he found "no fault with the new rule," and he said, "It is no different than what I've done all along."

Knights Club Lions, 18-0

Peter Stickney fanned 16 as the Knights of Columbus smacked the Lions Club, 18-0, Tuesday in a Midget League game.

For the Knights, Steve Crowley had four hits, including a double and a triple; his brother Bill had two hits, including a grand slam home run, and Dave Merrifield and Chris Gonyea chipped in with three and two hits each.

Mike LaFaso had the only two hits for the Lions. Chris Wood was the losing pitcher.

Moose Club North Champ

After taking a slim 2-1 decision over the K of C Tuesday night, the Moose Club secured first place in the Northern Division of the Rutland Midget League with an 11-1 record.

The Moose Club was led by Joe Lanzillo, who pitched a three-hitter while striking out 10.

Dave Chase drove in one of the Moose Club's runs, and Randy Clark also slammed a single for the club. The Moose Club now meets the Southern Division champions, WHWB, who sport an undefeated, 12-0, record for the championship.

Aces Down Town, 7-4

Kevin Markowski pitched a two-hitter, while fanning 11 batters, and also added a single at the plate to lead the Rotary Aces to a 7-4 Senior Babe Ruth victory over Rutland Town at Dewey Field Tuesday night.

Craig Dikeman chipped in a single and a double, and Tom Fiske added two singles to the Aces' attack, who raised their record to 7-6 on the year.

Darrell Sharon was the losing pitcher.

Interested persons may register at the center from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday. The cost for the eight weeks will be $8, and is payable at the time of registration.

BIKE SAFETY
I was upset when I read about the tragic accident that claimed the life of a thirteen year old Georgia bicyclist, but I was furious when I read the steps that the City of Rutland was planning to make things safer. Mr. Cioffredi "Arranged to have a crossing guard at the intersection of Crescent Street and Preville Avenue until the day camp ends", and also "To have some brush cleared from the area around the Crescent Street Bridge to improve visibility".

"The acting Mayor (Moore) said he did not know what could be done beyond the action taken by Cioffredi".

Maybe as a reader, and as a person who deals daily with youths in the field of education, I could offer a suggestion. Why not enforce some safety/traffic regulations for bicyclists? I don't believe that bicycle-car accidents can be blamed solely on "environmental conditions". This accident probably would not have occurred if safety/traffic regulations were enforced. #1: Common bicycles are designed for only one rider, and #2: One-Way signs are to be observed by all traffic, including bicyclists.

It's terrible the way many bicyclists abuse their vehicles and the rules of the road. And it's even worse the way I have seen the regulations ignored by both bicyclists and those responsible for upholding the law.

Instead of "crossing guards and brush trimming", why not try educating bicyclists and enforcing the laws?

It's sad to think that Mr. Moore could not think of more that could be done, beyond the suggestions of Mr. Cioffredi. Common sense is necessary for all bicyclists and acting mayors!

BIKE LAWS

I read in the Herald the other day about the fatal accident on Crescent Street and it wasn't no surprise to me at all. The way bicycles are ridden today is a disgrace and the police don't do anything about it at all. Now I have a nice bicycle that I use for transportation and I obey all the laws a person on a bicycle is supposed to ride the same as an auto. They are supposed to stop at all traffic lights and obey signs at all times. Even adults don't obey the law. The other day I was riding my bike up Forest Street. An adult was riding a bike on South Street. She turned on Forest Street just ahead of me. She had a seat on back and a small child. She stopped for a red light at River Street while two cars went by then she drove thru a red light. It was a very poor judgment for the child on back to see. Every spring the cops put on a big show they have people (especially kids) come up to City Hall to have their bikes registered. Well just a handful of kids show up. The rest go unregistered and nothing is done about it. Forest Park is full of unregistered bikes. People ride anywhere they please down one way streets the wrong way, etc. They race down the porch at the Rutland Plaza and endanger peoples lives and again nothing is done about it. Today in order to enforce laws a person has to be killed or seriously injured.

People complained about the Crescent Street problem but again nothing was ever done about it. Then a kid is killed and now a crossing guard is hired and brush is being cut. But not until someone is killed.

They lock the barn after the horse has been stolen so to speak. Why are laws made and not enforced? Don't make sense to me. I think its about time something was done before more people are hurt and if adults don't have enough brains to obey the laws how are kids supposed to do so?

Why should I get my bike registered and have 100 others get away with out doing so. It isn't fair and don't even make sense. Let's wake up and do something now.

Car-Bike Mishap Claims Life of Boy

Thirteen-year-old Brian Wenke died early Thursday morning of injuries suffered 12 hours earlier in a car-bike accident in Rutland.

Wenke and a companion, 12-year-old Jonathan Brisbane, were riding two-up on a bicycle when they were struck on Crescent Street about 3 p.m. Wednesday.

According to police, the boys had just come out of Preville Avenue and were struck at the Crescent Street bridge. City Police identified the driver of the car as Barbara M. Smith, 71, of Poultney, who was traveling west on Crescent.

Wenke was first taken to Rutland Hospital and then transferred to Medical Center Hospital in Burlington. According to Regional Medical Examiner Brian W. Little, Wenke died of severe head injuries. The boy was pronounced dead at 3:10 a.m. Thursday.

Brisbane suffered a broken leg and scrapes and bruises. He was listed in satisfactory condition at Rutland Hospital Thursday.

The two Georgia boys were visiting relatives in Rutland. According to the police report, the boys were riding south on Preville Avenue, which is a one-way street going north.

Witnesses at the accident said the two boys were coming from the day camp operated by the Rutland City Recreation Department at Giorgetti Park.

"It is a terrible, sad thing," Acting Rutland City Mayor Walter Moore said Thursday.

Moore said that he had been contacted early Thursday morning by Recreation and Parks Superintendent John W. Cioffredi and advised of steps taken to improve safety.

According to Moore, Cioffredi has arranged to have a crossing guard at the intersection of Crescent Street and Preville Avenue until the day camp ends.

In addition, Moore said, the head of the recreation department is going to have some brush cleared from the area around the Crescent Street bridge to improve

Car-Bicycle Accident Seriously Injures Two Youths From Georgia

By JACK HOFFMAN
and B.K. MARQUARD

Two Georgia youths, in Rutland visiting friends, were seriously injured Wednesday afternoon in a car-bike accident in the intersection of Crescent Street and Preville Avenue.

Rutland City Police said the driver of the bicycle, Brian Wenke, 13, of Decatur, Ga., suffered a skull fracture, "massive brain trauma," a fractured shoulder blade, multiple scrapes and bruises.

Wenke was described as "very critical" by a spokesman at the Medical Center Hospital in Burlington late Wednesday night.

A passenger on the bicycle, Jonathan Brisbane, 12, also of Decatur, suffered a fractured left leg, multiple scrapes and bruises, police said. He was reported in satisfactory condition at the Rutland Hospital.

Police said the boys were traveling south on Preville Avenue toward Crescent Street at approximately 3 p.m. Wednesday. Preville Avenue is a one-way street going north.

The two boys collided with an auto operated by Barbara M. Smith, 71, of Poultney as she crossed the Crescent Street bridge over Otter Creek.

Another youth, riding a bicycle just in front of the two Georgia boys, narrowly missed being hit, police said.

Wenke and Brisbane came out of Preville Avenue and collided with the car. Police said the impact flipped the two youths into the car, damaging the front end of the car and shattering the windshield.

Witness at the scene of the accident said the two youths were coming from the Rutland Recreation Department day camp at Giorgetti Park at the time of the accident.

The two youths were transported to the Rutland Hospital by Aldous Ambulance Service. Wenke was transferred to Burlington late Wednesday afternoon.

Police Cpl. Frank Kelly said Wednesday afternoon after the accident that "predominantly when a bike and a automobile are involved in an accident, the bicycle is at fault."

Kelly noted that in an another recent incident involving a bicycle and a car, the bicyclist was cited in court for a traffic violation.

Mary D. Babbitt of 194 Crescent St., who lives just up the hill from where the accident occurred, said she will try to get city officials to do something about traffic in her neighborhood. Babbitt said she plans to visit City Hall Thursday.

"I wish one of these officials would come sit on my corner from 2 to 4 some afternoon and see how many (vehicles) go by and the way they go by," Babbitt said.

"There's a prime example," she said Wednesday afternoon, pointing to a vehicle accelerating rapidly from the intersection of Grove and Crescent streets. "He goes by my corner at least three times a day."

visibility.

The acting mayor said he did not know what could be done beyond the action taken by Cioffredi. Moore acknowledged that the bridge poses a problem, but he indicated that lowering the bridge would be impractical.

Cioffredi could not be reached Thursday night.

The problem on Crescent Street is that there is a dip just east of the bridge, and it is difficult for motorist traveling west to see what is on the other side of the hump-shaped bridge.

Alderman Ethel W. Stearns, chairman of the board's Public Safety Committee, said her committee will take up the issue of Crescent Street traffic problems at a meeting next Monday or Tuesday.

Stearns, too, said she is not quite sure what can be done to correct the problems with the bridge.

Accident

Babbitt admitted that she has not asked any city officials to curb the speed of motorist along Crescent Street. However, she said she and others in the neighborhood did ask for a stop sign at the corner of Geno Avenue and Crescent Street.

That request was turned down, she said, as was a request for a crossing guard during the school year.

Babbitt did not witness Wednesday's accident. She heard it, however, and she was one of the first to call for help.

"I heard the screech of tires and rushed out the door," she said. "I saw a kid lying in the road and called the police."

According to Babbitt, there is a lot of traffic along Crescent Street. She said people traveling between Pittsford or North Main Street and West Rutland frequently use the street.

In Babbitt's view, city officials are not aware of how many youngsters have moved into the area between Fairview Avenue and Grove Street. She estimated that at least 20 kids have moved into the area in the two years she has lived on Crescent Street.

"City officials are not aware of the juvenile population in the area," Babbitt said. "A lot of them have come in there, and 90 percent of them are bike riders."

"I know. I've got three of my own," Babbitt added, referring to her children aged six, seven and nine.

She acknowledged that kids on bicycles pose problems for motorists.

"Kids don't follow the Preville (Avenue) sign," she said.

She also explained that, particularly in the summer, there is a lot of bike traffic along Preville Avenue with children going to Giorgetti Park or to the playground at Northwest School.

Michael Walsh of 111 Fairview Ave. shares Babbitt's concern about the traffic problems in the area. He, too, said that there are a lot of kids riding bikes near the bridge.

Walsh said the problems is two-fold for traffic headed west on Crescent Street. First, he said, drivers are blind to what is on the other side of the bridge just before they start to cross it. He also said that, for the number of kids that now live and play in the area, drivers go too fast on Crescent Street.

There is no speed limit sign between Grove Street and the bridge on Crescent Street.

Walsh said he knows of no one who has complained to city officials about traffic problems in the neighborhood. However, he said he has frequently heard area residents talk about them.

Walsh is a paramedic with the Rutland Fire Department. Living right near the accident, he was the first medical attendant to reach the youths.

Magoo's Plays Spoiler Role

A team effort on the part of the Magoo's women's softball club ended Mother F's long winning streak Thursday night at Meadow St. Field in a tight 12-10 contest.

A well-played game both offensively and defensively on either side, Magoo's took the initiative early with four runs in the first inning and never trailed throughout the remainder of the match.

Dikeman Outduels Jackson

Winning a classic pitcher's duel, Craig Dikeman of Rotary tossed a two-hitter, fanning 10 batters along the way, as Rotary went on to take a slim 3-2 decision over Marble Savings in Senior Babe Ruth action Friday night.

Marble Savings pitcher Todd Jackson was the hard-luck loser in spite of his three-hitter. Jackson also recorded 10 strikeouts, but was hurt by a couple of crucial errors behind him.

Rotary scored unearned runs in the second and sixth inning as Dikeman's single in the fifth was the only earned run given up by Jackson. Marble Savings scored single runs in the fourth on Bob Parker's grounder and a Rotary miscue in the seventh. Oddly enough, with two on and two out in the bottom of the seventh, Dikeman had to strike out Jackson to end the game.

Greg Nacis and Dan Norris had the other two hits for Rotary as Mike Demo and Paul Piscapo had the two Marble Savings' singles. Rotary improved to 5-4 with the win.

Aces Downs Marble Savings

As steady hurler Craig Dikeman registered another fine outing, this time tossing a two-hitter, the Rotary Aces improved to 8-6 in the Senior Babe Ruth standings with a 7-2 victory over Marble Savings Friday night.

Both of Marble Savings runs were unearned. And in addition to his fine mound performance, Dikeman also lashed a single that drove in a run.

Todd Jackson was the hard-luck loser for the Savings as he and Mike Deno were the only batters to get a hit off Dikeman. For Rotary, it was Greg Leno, with an RBI single, and Dom Cioffi, singling and scoring twice, leading the Aces' offensively.

Tom Eslick To Perform

The Rutland Recreation & Parks Department will present Tom Eslick in concert on Tuesday at Main Street Park from 7 to 9 p.m.

Eslick is a singer, guitarist and composer chosen by Downbeat Magazine as one of the top recording performing artists in contemporary music. He has four albums on the market.

Eslick blends lyrics with music expertly. As a single performer, he has a gifted ability at drawing an audience into his performance with his distinct baritone voice and his dexterity on both the 6 and 12-string acoustic guitars.

Between songs, he gives a brief history of the next song or an amusing anecdote about the last one.

Adolescents have commented that his singing is "laid-back" and "smooth," while those over 30 recognize a blend of country and folk. The common denominator is enjoyment.

Eslick has performed throughout New England at public and private schools, colleges, universities and summer festivals.

In the event of rain, the concert will be held in the gym at the Lawrence Recreation Center.

Tots Program Has Openings

The Rutland Recreation & Parks Department has a limited number of openings in its program for 3 year olds at Rotary Field House.

Each session is $15 and must be paid for at the time of registration. Enrollment is possible in one or all of the sessions if there are openings at the time of registration.

A child must be age 3 by the time the session begins and cannot turn 4 until Jan. 1, 1982, to be eligible for this program. The 4 year olds enrollment is filled.

GREG McCALLEN PRAISED

Hats off to Greg McClallen (track coach) and his Rutland track team who recently finished third competing against teams from cities all over the state, at the Vermont State Track Meet Aug. 9 at Essex Junction.

The special feat was that the Rutland team, 30 or 40 strong, competed against teams that were 70 to 130 strong.

If a little more interest was shown by more kids, and a little more coaxing by parents, our city would finish well ahead of the field.

So much effort was done by Coach McClallen and his staff, with so few kids to work with.

Coach McClallen is also a very excellent track coach and English teacher at Rutland High School who has been in the system for more than 12 years. He will be surely missed if the Rutland High School educational system lets these talents slip by, through the dismissal of some teachers because of a budget problem.

I would suggest that some evaluation and consideration be taken in this matter.

Seniors' Yard Conflicts With Kids

By MEGAN PRICE

Rutland City Mayor John J. Daley will meet with the recreation department's superintendent, John W. Cioffredi, Friday to determine whether construction at the city's senior citizens center is in the best interest of the neighborhood and the elderly it serves.

About two weeks ago, workers began construction of a shelter which will allow outdoor cookouts on the north side of the building. Shuffleboard, a bocce court and horseshoes will follow.

Daley said that a recent meeting with members of the Rutland Council of Senior Citizens, questions were raised whether the addition of recreational facilities at the Woodstock Avenue center would be appropriate.

"The way I hear it, I'm not so sure they even want that now," Daley said in an interview in City Hall Thursday.

Frank Maranville, head of the senior council said, "It remains to be seen how much use the area will get. Our group is not real enthused."

Maranville, who is feuding with Cioffredi now on evening use of the center, said he believes Cioffredi has authorized construction "to make a showplace" of the center rather than meet the real needs of seniors.

"I think he (Cioffredi) does a good job except for the seniors. He pushes us around," Maranville charged.

The elderly who use the center "never go out back period. They take a look out the kitchen window is all," Maranville said.

Cioffredi was out of town Thursday, according to a secretary at the recreation department. He could not be reached at home.

A recreation department secretary could not produce blueprints for the project or document the cost of construction. Pratico

"I will be consulting with Mr. Cioffredi to see what the whole plan is," Daley said. "Maybe a reassessment should be done at this time to control future construction there."

The recreational facilities for seniors will eliminate a playground area used by neighborhood children for "about 40 years," said the mayor.

Daley and his family lived on adjacent Deer Street in the mid-1970s, when the senior center was being considered.

As a private citizen, he and other neighbors attended informational meetings to discuss where the building would be located on the large tract of land it now occupies.

Twelve-year-old Tom Rodriguez of Deer Street is one of those children affected.

"I was here five years ago when they put in the senior citizens center," the boy said. "It was great back then. It was all grass. Then the trucks came in and they put in all kinds of roads."

"All of us kids used to practice our mighty-mites and little league there," the boy said pointing to the construction scene.

"There's nothing we can do there any more, now that they got that goin' in," he said of this new construction.

"I guess it's all gone now. So we're trying to put together a go-cart now and see if we can have some fun," he said.

The mayor said he and others in the neighborhood opposed the mid-center location chosen for the building back in 1976.

"I thought the building should be on the south end of the lot," he said. "It's a fine building and it should be seen from the street (Woodstock Avenue)," he said.

That way the lot would have accommodated both old and young, the mayor said.

But senior citizens disagreed, according to the mayor. "They thought we were trying to push them into one corner. They wanted the whole lot."

"My kids have played there. It was a marvelous spot for children to go and spend some leisure time," Daley said.

"When I saw it (the center) being built I was disappointed. The front end of it is just out of proportion," Daley said. "By putting it where it is they have made much less usable land on the Woodstock Avenue end."

Meanwhile, Senior Center Director Dorothy Paul flatly refused to talk to a reporter.

She said she would not discuss any aspect of the center's activity unless it was done in the presence of John Cioffredi.

"I don't do any discussion without talking first to Mr. Cioffredi," she said.

But she denied her refusal was on orders from her boss. "It is my decision," Paul said.

Maranville said he and other seniors will be meeting at the center next Tuesday night to discuss problems they are having with the recreation department.

Among them is the fact that Cioffredi would like the council to schedule its bi-weekly meetings for daylight hours rather than in the evening.

Cioffredi Rebuts Criticism; Says Seniors Needs Were Not Ignored

By MEGAN PRICE

Rutland City Recreation and Parks Superintendent John W. Cioffredi Friday countered charges he has ignored the interests of senior citizens and neighborhood children in approving the construction of a recreation area for seniors at the Woodstock Avenue center.

Frank Maranville, president of the Rutland Council of Senior Citizens, made the charges Thursday.

Maranville questioned whether the recreation area — which will feature four shuffleboard courts, two horseshoe pits and a large covered picnic area — is something city seniors need.

Cioffredi said the project is the direct result of requests made by an advisory council composed of oldsters.

The meeting which initiated the project occurred "about two years ago," according to the director.

"Frank himself was there," Cioffredi said. "He mentioned the picnic shelter. That was his idea. It was something he personally asked for."

And Cioffredi said he agreed it was a good idea.

"We've tried to have picnics there in the past and there was no shade there for people, or it would rain."

Other items mentioned included a bocce court, shuffleboard, horseshoes and a therapeutic pool, Cioffredi said.

The pool and bocce court were eliminated by federal officials who reviewed the application, Cioffredi said.

Cioffredi was away from the office Friday and could not give an accurate estimate of the cost of construction at the Woodstock Avenue center.

But "I believe it's around $100,000," he said.

The project is funded with federal money from the Heritage Conservation and Recreation Service.

"We've had meetings on this," he said. "Advertised it on the radio and in the newspaper. Like every one of those things, nobody comes."

"But the seniors knew about it because we've talked about it up there," the director said.

"My philosophy is that seniors should be active, not always sitting. I think there's more to being a senior citizen than sitting around being entertained. We try to make the seniors active."

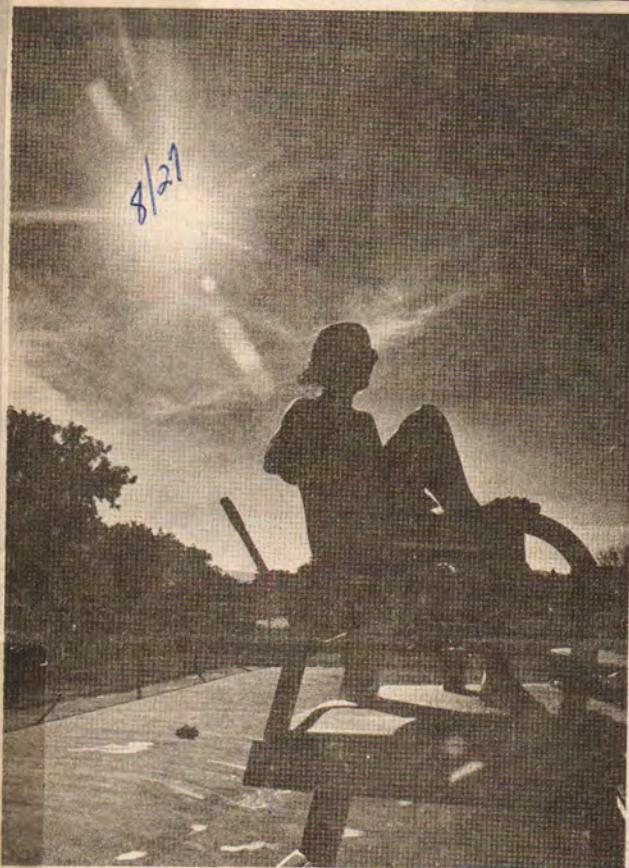

As for charges neighborhood children are being pushed out of the area unnecessarily, Cioffredi said, "Where this stuff is being built, the kids were never there."

"We're trying to utilize the area as best we can. To make it more productive, more useful. I see no problem with youngsters still using the area."

Cioffredi said he has considered adding some swings to the lot for area children.

"A lot of seniors have grandchildren and I should think they'd want to being them up with them when they visit. I will mention it to the advisory group as a possibility," he said.

Police Seek Sexual Assailant

City police, who are terming the incident as "an attempted sexual assault," are looking for a man who knocked a 21-year-old Rutland woman to the ground while she was walking her dog Sunday afternoon.

The woman, who is from the Williams Street area, was assaulted in Giorgetti Park around 4:40 p.m., said city police.

Her assailant is described as 5 feet 10 inches tall, of medium build and between 25-35 years old with graying hair, said police. He has a dark mustache and was wearing glasses, jeans and a stripe shirt, police said.

Police said a man pushed the woman to the ground and covered her mouth to keep her from screaming for help.

But before her attacker got any further, the woman's dog scared the man away, police said.

The assailant was last seen walking toward Crescent Street, police said.

Officials are asking persons with any information as to the man's identity to call city police at 775-2030.

Guess which one of these three members of the B&M Bombers is a very disgruntled Joe Robertson? Shown at the far right, Robertson has obvious objections to the controversial ditch in Rotary Field that spoiled his day.

Ditch Strands B&M Bombers

By PATRICK HUSSEY

About 5 p.m. Wednesday night, members of both the B&M Bombers and General Electric softball teams ambled onto Rotary Field in preparation for their Division C City Softball Championship showdown, set to begin at 6 p.m. sharp.

Unfortunately, and much to the players' dismay, a large ditch stretching from right field to right-center, confronted them, preventing the title tilt from even starting. But what really made players like Joseph S. Robertson of the B&M Bombers upset and unhappy was being left in the dark about the trench. Especially when the game's site and time had been scheduled for over a week.

Early Wednesday morning, the Giancola Construction Company moved its equipment onto the field in an attempt to solve the drainage problem there. Under the terms of its contract, Giancola had the go-ahead to fix the field at its convenience.

Bill Reardon, who is in charge of maintaining the city fields for the Recreation Dept., noticed the equipment at Rotary early Wednesday morning, but assumed the job would be completed by game time that evening. Reardon was caught off guard when he discovered upon returning for the game that evening that the ditch was never filled.

After some last minute discussions, it was decided the games would not be played because of the obvious safety hazard. Instead, the championship will be played later this week. But in the meantime, the mix-up has botched some post-game plans for members of Robertson's team.

"I took time off from my vacation in Connecticut to come up for this game," fumed Robertson. "It's one thing that the field can't be played on, but nobody was ever told anything about the field."

"We had guys who had other people work for them because they knew the game was tonight. Some of the players' wives even took time off so they could be here for the game. I know I'm in real trouble with my wife because of this."

"I was supposed to go back to Connecticut tomorrow (Thursday) and head to Cape Cod with my wife. Bruno's Market (the co-sponsor of the team) had a celebration planned for us after the game with kegs, food and champagne, but we can't have it now. This has spoiled all our plans."

"Our sponsor has to pay $230 to join the league, and that's supposed to take care of the referees and the fields. We should never have to worry about having the field in playing condition. There are about 40-50 teams who have to pay that fee, so there should be no excuse about not having a field."

"There were also two umpires who showed up expecting a game, one from Poultney and one from Mt. Holly. That's a long way to travel to find out there's no game."

According to John Ciofreddi, head of the Recreation Department, his office was never informed of the situation. "I was in my office until 5 p.m. tonight (Wednesday) and nobody called me about the situation," said Ciofreddi.

"Those players have every right to be upset. The only thing I can do now is apologize for a situation I had no control over. The bottom line is that I am responsible, but I was never informed about the field."

Ciofreddi said he called the contractor, John Allard of Giancola, about the situation late Wednesday night. According to Ciofreddi, Giancola had every right to go ahead with the project. But Ciofreddi was upset with the fact that nobody checked to see what was scheduled for the field that evening.

As Ciofreddi said, a little more common sense in the matter could have eased some of the burden.

A phone call certainly would have made life easier for Joe Robertson.

Mother F's Are Champions

In Rutland City Softball League action Wednesday night, the Mother F's team captured the women's double elimination tournament title by defeating runner-up T.J.'s. En route to their title, Mother F's twice defeated Zayres, Sports Peddler and T.J.'s. T.J.'s defeated Back Home Cafe, Carriage Room and Sports Peddler before losing to Mother F's in the title game. Two divisions of women's softball are planned for next year's schedule.

Football Meeting Slated

There will be an organizational meeting of the Rutland Recreation Department's adult flag football league on Tuesday, Sept. 1, at 7:30 p.m. at the Recreational center.

All interested team representatives should attend this get-together.

Police Arrest Two Juveniles

Two 15-year-old Rutland youths apprehended in separate incidents Thursday morning by Rutland City Police have been lodged at the juvenile detention center in Waterbury.

Several recent break-ins in Rutland homes may be solved as a result of one of the arrests, police said Thursday afternoon.

Cpl. Frank Kelly, the city police information officer, said police responded to an 8 a.m. call Thursday morning for a breaking and entering in progress at the White's Playground pool shed.

A 15-year-old Rutland juvenile was apprehended and later sent to the juvenile detention center in Waterbury for emergency detention by order of the juvenile court, Kelly said.

At approximately 11 a.m., the Merchants Row offices of the Howard Bank notified police that there was a male subject attempting to cash a check that had recently been stolen in a house break-in on Adams Street.

Kelly said officers responded immediately and took into custody a 15-year-old Rutland juvenile at the bank.

The juvenile court later ordered that the suspect be sent to the juvenile detention center in Waterbury.

Kelly said that as a result of the youths arrest, "approximately six other check forgery charges will be brought forth, and several other house breaks in the city should be cleared up."

Senior Citizens Center

Rutland Seniors Get Clearance for Night Meetings at Center

By PAUL TEETOR

An agreement was worked out at an Aldermanic Recreation Committee meeting that will allow the Rutland Council of Senior Citizens to hold two nightly meetings a month at the Senior Citizens Center on Deer Street.

The meeting, which was held at the Senior Citizens Center Tuesday night, was called in response to the appearance of several dozen senior citizens at the board of aldermen meeting of Aug. 17th.

At that meeting, Frank Maranville, president of the Rutland Council of Senior Citizens, a 400-member private group, told the board that his group was not being allowed to hold its meetings at night as they had in the past.

Maranville asked that the Department of Recreation Commissioner, John Cioffredi, give him a key to the Senior Citizens Center so his group could hold their meetings at night without supervision.

Maranville opened Tuesday night's meeting by asking the recreation committee to instruct Cioffredi to give him a key to the Senior Citizens Center to hold meetings at night.

"All we're asking for is two evenings a month and a key to the center, which would allow us to hold our meetings without any supervision or overtime on the part of center employees," Maranville said. "That would be right in keeping with the city's economy push."

Cioffredi, in response, defended his decision to discontinue the nightly meetings as a response to the recent directive from the board of aldermen to cut his budget by a minimum of 5 percent.

"I had a line item in my budget for the money these nightly meetings would cost us in overtime, but I had to make some adjustments and that was an item that had to go," Cioffredi said.

Cioffredi went on to relate the series of events leading up to the dispute over the night time meetings.

"Frank and I talked this whole problem over several months ago, and I asked if a solution could be worked out," Cioffredi said.

"At that time we agreed that Frank and his group would try two afternoon meetings and if that didn't work out, he would come back to meet with me and we would try to work something out. We even shook hands on it," Cioffredi said. "I know they had one afternoon meeting, but that was the last I heard of that idea. Frank never came back to meet with me again."

Maranville agreed that Cioffredi's recollection of events was accurate, but he went on to say, "I didn't come back to you after our afternoon meeting because we have come back to you too much. You've been trying to dissolve our group for the last 12 months."

At that point, Alderman

Hayden Bride, chairman of the Recreation Committee, warned Maranville not to get into personalities.

"I think we can solve this problem without dragging up old feuds," Bride said.

"Maybe John (Cioffredi) can make arrangements with the employees at the center to have them stagger their hours on the days your group wants to meet at night, and that way you can still have the meetings without costing the city any overtime.

Cioffredi said such an arrangement would be "no problem," and he and Maranville agreed to meet to work out the details.

"I wish all our problems were so easily solved," Alderman Joseph Paul said after the meeting.

Running A 1,400 Mile Dream

By YVONNE DALEY

Jimmy Fund benefit-runner Dave McGillivray's day started off cold as he left Burlington Tuesday, running through the crisp Vermont morning with 67.8 miles ahead of him.

Down Route 2 to Route 7, he ran, with remarkable speed, passing through Shelburne and Ferrisburg, Vergennes, Middlebury, Brandon, Pittsford and into Rutland.

McGillivray arrived in Rutland at 3:30 in the afternoon. The day had warmed up considerably into a typical Indian summer beauty. "But we nearly froze our (bleeps) off this morning," one of the accompanying runners said.

As McGillivray neared the downtown area, about 10 members of the Gaelic Athletic Club, led by Chittenden resident, Hugh Short, 59, met him and accompanied him into the city.

In Rutland, McGillivray paused at the Green Mountain Boy Statue in the Main Street Park and was officially greeted to the City by Rutland little league player Marc Pratico, 11, before calling it quits for the day.

Pratico, wearing a Red Sox uniform, told McGillivray that Rutland was proud of his charitable work for the Jimmy Fund, a children's cancer research and treatment center.

Dave McGillivray runs for kids.

McGillivray, 27, from Medford, Mass., is running 1,400 miles through the six New England states for the Jimmy Fund between Sept. 18 and Oct. 18. The course will take him through 250 New England cities.

"It's the children," the veteran marathon runner said, explaining his reason for the long-distance run. "I do it for the kids."

"In the few years I've been associated with the Jimmy Fund, I've come to know many of these children personally," McGillivray said. "On this run I want to raise more money than any other single fund raiser has in Jimmy Fund history. That's my main goal."

The Jimmy Fund began in 1947, the result of work done by the late Dr. Sidney Farber, recognized as the father of modern chemotherapy. It is the primary source of private support for the Sidney Farber Cancer Institute in Boston and its cancer research and treatment programs for children.

The fund had its beginning when an organization of film and theater leaders called the Variety Clubs, established the Children's Cancer Research Foundation, to help Farber's research.

The Boston Braves joined the appeal with a radio appeal about a 12-year-old cancer patient called, simply "Jimmy" to protect his anonymity. The name stuck and the foundation became known as the Jimmy Fund.

In more recent years, the Boston Red Sox and their well-known owner, the late Tom Yawkey, supported the charity. It is now the only official charity of the Boston Red Sox.

McGillivray has participated in several charity runs, including two for the Jimmy Fund.

One was the nationally covered 3,452-mile trek across America in 1978 that raised $150,000; and a 1,520-mile run up the east coast in 1980 with wheelchair athlete Bob Hall that raised $100,000 for the Jimmy Fund.

But, raising money for the Jimmy Fund isn't McGillivray's only reason for the New England run. He said he wants "to bring New England together, as a single community, in one big effort to achieve one goal."

The run has a few amenities for the athlete, also, giving him the opportunity to test his skills in a kind of triathlon. McGillivray cycles some of the distance, as well as swimming some of the New England trek.

(See Page 17: Runner)

SEPTEMBER 30, 1981

Runner

There's a personal satisfaction, also. McGillivray said he "loves putting together projects, especially ones no one else would even consider putting together." In this manner, he can be creative, athletic, and work with the business world all in one venture.

McGillivray began the race in his Massachusetts hometown high school. He planned the event so he would go through the six state capitals. He ran both up and down Mt. Washington.

Other innovative features of the run include a swim from Woods Hole, Mass., to Martha's Vineyard and a run inside the track at the Walpole State Prison in Massachusetts.

The Princess House Inc., John Hancock Insurance Co., Sheraton Boston Hotel and Sheraton Inns, Hendries Ice Cream Co., T.I. Raleigh, Inc., Ackerley Communications, Inc., Rotary Clubs of New England, Aunyx Reproduction, Inc., Reynolds-DeWalt Printing, Inc. and Massachusetts Association of School Superintendents were sponsors of the New England Run for the Jimmy Fund.

Tomorrow morning, day 13, it will be more of the same for McGillivray as he begins mile 684, running from Rutland to Brattleboro, a 67 mile distance. McGillivray hopes that Vermont's weather will be fairly comfortable for a few more days.

108th Organ Concert

The Vermont Piano and Organ Co., in conjunction with the Rutland Recreation and Parks Department, Senior Center, will present a demonstration of piano and organ music on Wednesday, Oct. 7, at 11:45 a.m., at the Senior Center on Deer Street. This is a forerunner to lessons.

Senior Center Slide Series

The Rutland Recreation and Parks Department, Senior Center, will host the first in a series of slide presentations at the Senior Center on Monday, Oct. 1, at 1 p.m., entitled "Vermont Bridges and Waterfalls."

William Kibbey of Rutland is the presenter.

Kibbey has traveled Vermont with camera in hand and has put his slides together in a unique presentation of Vermont's many covered bridges and waterfalls.

The Rutland Senior Center is located on Deer Street.

Recreation Project Nearly Done at Senior Citi

Landscaping is all that is left to be done on the new recreation facilities located behind the Senior Citizens Center on Deer Street. This view from the Temple Street side of the senior center site shows the picnic shelter, the four shuffleboard courts that run out from the shelter. Part of a horseshoe pitch can also be seen at the lower right.

By JACK HOFFMAN

Except for landscaping, which will be done next spring, work on the new recreation facilities at the Rutland Senior Citizens Center is finished. Recreation and Parks Superintendent John W. Ciuffredi said Friday.

The picnic shelter, four shuffle board courts and two horse-shoe pitches have been constructed.

Ciuffredi said the cost of the new facilities is roughly $75,000.

The recreation director had difficulty Friday putting his hands on the exact figures for the project. He explained that the work at the senior center was done in conjunction with improvements at Rotary Field. An exact cost breakdown was not readily available, he said.

Two handball courts and some playground equipment were installed at Rotary Field. There was also some additional site work, Ciuffredi said. Power lines were buried, and ditches around the field were reworked.

As originally conceived, the Rotary Field project was more ambitious. The estimated cost for the two contracts was about $190,000, according to the records at the recreation department.

However, state funding was not available for the work at Rotary Field, Ciuffredi said, and that projects was scaled down.

The final cost estimate was around $125,000 — approximately $75,000 for the senior center and $50,000 at Rotary Field.

The winning bid for the two projects, which was submitted by Giancola Construction Corp. of Rutland, came in at a little more than $108,000, Ciuffredi said. He explained that the bids often come in lower than the estimates, and it appeared there were some additional savings at the Rotary Field, he said.

According to recreation director, the senior center project received 80 percent funding through the Heritage Conservation and Recreation Service, HCRS, formerly the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation. Fifty percent was federal money and 30 percent state.

Ciuffredi said the Rotary Field project only received the 50 percent federal funding.

In the 1979-80 budget, the city aldermen set aside $40,000 of federal revenue sharing money to cover the local share of the two projects. Approximately $15,000 went to the senior center recreational facilities. About $25,000 was put aside for Rotary Field, although from figures Ciuffredi disclosed on Friday it appeared that not all of that money will be spent.

Ciuffredi said there is room on the senior center site to install some playground equipment for neighborhood children who live in the vicinity of Temple Street. However, he said there are not specific plans to install the equipment.

"The senior center is assumed to be complete," Ciuffredi said.

The plans for the senior center show what is called an "informal ball diamond." It is marked off on the plans in an area that will be open lawn, according to Ciuffredi.

"It's more like an open lot," Ciuffredi said. He said there is actually no ball diamond, and the area is only large enough for small children to play.

City Police Offer Tips For Halloween Night

This year, Halloween will be celebrated Oct. 31, Rutland City Police said.

The Rutland Recreation Department Annual Halloween Parade will begin at 7 p.m. in the downtown shopping plaza by the Firestone store.

The parade will proceed north on Merchants row, east up Center Street, north on Wales Street, west on West Street and south on Merchants Row back to the shopping plaza parking lot.

City police recommend that youngsters go trick-or-treating between 4:30 p.m. and 9 p.m., and that younger children trick or treat between 4:30 p.m. and the start of the parade.

Homes that wish to distribute treats to youngsters Halloween night should leave an outside light shining as a welcome. Youngsters should refrain from disturbing houses where an outside light is not on.

Police suggest that trick-or-treaters not wear a face mask which obstructs their vision, and that youngsters wear light colored clothing, reflective material or carry a flashlight with them to make them visible to motorists.

Adult supervision is recommended for youngsters while they are out Halloween night, and police suggest that youngsters trick-or-treat in their own neighborhoods.

Youngsters trick-or-treating should be constantly on guard and aware of the traffic around them and should not run into the road.

Police ask that any criminal activity be reported to the department by calling 773-3355. The police department will be furnishing increased patrols Halloween night, and remind everyone that an act of vandalism is a crime.

Halloween Clue #1; Spiritualists Sought

The first of three Mr. Jack O'Lantern clues was discovered inside old whiskey bottle floating in the Otter Creek by a brave swimmer Sunday. The swimmer, after he was hosed down, released the contents of the note:

"Recreation is my key word, after all is said and done."

A word I hope is synonymous with what the kids call fun.

My job was to organize fun activities for all to enjoy from baseball, tennis and day camp for every girl and boy.

Guesses may be dropped off at the Recreation Center or at local elementary schools. They should include name, address, age and school. All correct guesses will be eligible for the grand prize drawing, following the

The child must be present at the Halloween parade Saturday to win. Mr. Jack O'Lantern will be unmasked at the conclusion of the parade.

Rutland Recreation

The Rutland Recreation Department is sponsoring a course in basic computer technique on Tuesday nights from Oct. 27 through Nov. 17.

The course is designed to teach students how to program a computer, use ready made program cartridges, experience graphix which are pictures made on computer screens and be exposed to some of the various computer games.

The Apple computer which is one of the most popular micro-computers in the United States will be used in this course. According to David Phelps, assistant manager of Electronic Applications, by 1985 one half of all the homes in the U.S. will have microcomputers.

Computers are also widely used in just about every kind of business in America.

It seems imperative that children have the proper exposure to computer programming to keep abreast of this new addition to our society. Many of the area schools have recently incorporated computer courses in their curriculum.

The course will be offered to Grades 6 and 7 from 6:30 to 8 p.m., and Grades 8 and 9 from 8 to 9:30 p.m. on

The Rutland Recreation Department hopes to attract youngsters interested in computer science who don't have access to computers by other means or simply want additional exposure. David Phelps will instruct the course at Electronic Applications, 36 Merchants Row. Phelps is a graduate of Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute where he took a number of computer courses.

RUTLAND SENIOR CHORUS COMMENDED

This is an open letter to the Rutland Senior Chorus and its director, Mr. Miles Finch.

Perhaps a lot of Rutland citizens (including community organizations) are not aware of a very affable group, otherwise known as the Rutland Senior Chorus. These citizens of Rutland and the surrounding community give their time and talent, free, to nursing homes and Granges or any group who would like to "hear good, nostalgic music" and be in the company of some very lovely people.

I as lecturer of Deermont Grange 368, salute you, the Rutland Senior Chorus, and I would highly endorse you and encourage other organizations to invite these folks to entertain them. Mr. Finch's telephone number is a Danby telephone number, and it is 1-802-293-5289, and I'm Guesses may be dropped off at the Recreation Center or at local elementary schools. They should include name, address, age and school. All correct guesses will be eligible for the grand prize drawing, following the parade.

The child must be present at the Halloween parade Saturday to win a new bicycle donated by K-Mart.

Mr. Jack O'Lantern will be unmasked at the conclusion of the parade. The contest is sponsored by the Recreation Department.

Platform Tennis Clinic Set

The Rutland Recreation Department will on Sunday, Nov. 1, from 2-4 p.m. sponsor an introductory clinic for those interested in learning how to play platform tennis. The clinic will be held at the courts at White's Playground.

The clinic, which will be conducted by tennis pro Tom Harty of Mendon's Cortina Inn, is free of charge to the public. All necessary equipment will be supplied.

Although the game is fairly new to this area, platform tennis is one of New England's most popular outdoor winter activities. The Recreation Department is hopeful that the public will take advantage of free court time at White's twin facilities to become acquainted with the sport.

Free court time is an unusual phenomenon, says Harty.

"This is probably the only place in New England that has public courts," Harty said. "The courts are very expensive and playing usually involves a membership fee. This is a unique opportunity for people here to play the game."

The game is similar to tennis and scored the same way. It is played with a wooden paddle and a sponge rubber ball on a court that is totally screened in except for the ceiling. The court is surrounded by walls approximately 10 feet high.

"It's easier to play than tennis," added Harty, the Cortina pro since last January. He noted that the game does not involve hitting the ball with a lot of power. "Someone who is not very good at tennis can pick it up easily. It's strictly a doubles game, and a great mixed doubles game."

"It just takes a quick clinic to get the idea of it; we're hoping to get a lot of people out there," Harty said.

Harty will deliver a lecture and will then take to the surfaces to match up with players from this area. He will conduct several drills before putting newcomers on the courts.

The rain date for the clinic will be Sunday, Nov. 8, at the same time and location.

Senior Citizens Center

The Rutland Recreation & Parks Department's Senior Center will sponsor the following activities at the center during the week Nov. 9 through Nov. 13.

Wednesday: Closed in observance of Veteran's Day.

Thursday: Senior Home Demonstration Club, 10 a.m.; needlecrafts, 10 a.m.; tennis league, noon at Brookside (final week); Bingo, 1:15 p.m.

All those interested in coaching a team, please be present. Steve Marro is again going to act as the supervisor for the league. Games this year will be held on Saturdays at the Lawrence Recreation Center.

City's Big Halloween Parade Is Tonight

By MEGAN PRICE

Rutland streets will be overrun with goblins, ghouls and ghosts Saturday when the city's 22nd annual Halloween parade begins at 7 p.m.

More than 40 floats are expected to participate in the unique late-night spectacle, according to a spokesman for the Rutland Recreation and Parks Department which sponsors the event.

Included in the parade will be elementary and high school students from Rutland, West Rutland, Clarendon and Brandon.

Numerous floats with graveyard humor will be included.

Students at Mill River Union High School have been busy building their float for the past two weeks, according to art teacher

Marilyn Candlish.

"There's 60 kids who have worked on it," she said. "One night we were here until 10 o'clock at night."

For the past five years, under Candlish's tutelage, the school has chosen a unique costumed theme. And each year, they win a trophy for their efforts.

Last year, the students went to the Mid-East for the night with a "Trip to the Egyptian Nile."

This year, according to Candlish, the students have been studying Japan.

Teacher and students have been poring over film strips, slides and studying books for costume ideas, she said.

Sumo wrestlers, giant Buddhas, and the martial arts will all be characterized on the Clarendon students' float, she said.

And President Richard Nixon, whose rubber-faced appearance made a big hit last year in the guise of Rutland bar owner James Boss, is scheduled to have his own float this year.

A re-make of the Muppets is also scheduled to appear, along with superheroes Superman, Batman, and the Huntress.

Local dignitaries will not miss a chance to wave to their constituents either either.

Mayor John J. Daley will be on hand as will others well-known local personages.

The revelers will snake through the streets beginning at Merchants Row.

They will turn east at Center Street, head north to Wales Street, turn left on West Street and turn south back down to Merchants Row and the parking lot.

There the identity of the mysterious Jack-O-lantern will be revealed and prizes awarded.

City police have asked parents to take their youngsters trick-or-treating between 4:30 p.m. and the start of the parade.

Older children, who go out alone, are asked to complete their rounds by 9 p.m.

Homeowners who will be distributing treats are asked to leave an outside light shining as a beacon to costumed visitors.

Parents are asked to remind their children not to visit homes where an outside light is not shining.

Any acts of vandalism should be reported to the police.

Platform Tennis

Due to the enthusiastic response at the Rutland Recreation Department's Platform Tennis Clinic on Nov. 1, the Rutland Recreation Department is going to sponsor group lessons for all ability levels at 7 and 8 p.m. on Tuesday, Nov. 10, at 7 p.m. on Thursday, Nov. 12, and 2 p.m. on Sunday, Nov. 14, the fee is $2 per lesson.

Each clinic can accommodate eight players, four per court.

Approximately 50 people attended the Nov. 1 free introductory clinic taught by Tom Harty, a professional tennis and platform tennis instructor. From this clinic, 32 people signed up for group lessons which are taking place this week.

Parade Ghoulish Delight

By YVONNE DALEY

RUTLAND — Rutlanders turned out in ghoulish droves Saturday night to watch the macabre floats and ingenious costumes in the 22nd annual Rutland Recreation and Parks Halloween parade.

Rutlanders showed up to see Batman and Robin, Superman, Bugs Bunny and Donald Duck, Tricky Dick Nixon and even Santa Claus.

Children dressed in creative costumes lined the sidewalks. Some were overwhelmed by the scarier costumes and cried, but most enjoyed the fun.

About 30 floats were entered in the parade, along with individuals on foot. Bands from Mount St. Joseph Academy, Rutland High School, Mill River Union High School, Otter Valley Union High School and West Rutland played creepy tunes to add to the atmosphere.

Mayor John J. Daley led the parade.

The parade, one of the most popular events in Rutland, is so well-known that it was used as a setting for a Marvel comic book some years back. In the comic, all the super-heroes showed up on Bald Mountain to attend the annual Rutland parade.

They would not have been disappointed with this year's attraction.

Mill River's float, "Honoring Ancient Japan," won the best float trophy. Abundant were girls in kimonos, sumo wrestlers and karate fighters, a 40-foot dragon, a huge Buddha and wonderfully delicate Japanese-painted posters.

Marilyn Candlish, art teacher at Mill River in North Clarendon, co-ordinated the making of the float, showing students slides and movies and teaching them about ancient Japan in preparation for the parade.

Mr. Jack O'Lantern was unveiled by the Halloween parade queen, Kelly Carabeua, a Mill River senior. He was none other than Bob Richardson, an employee at Rutland's Recreation Department.

Other prizes went to a group of muppets for most creative float. The most original float award went to the Vermont Achievement Center.

Rutland High School won a trophy for the best band and majorettes.

The best costume went to Super Stud and Foxy Lady.

A group of motorcyclists from a motorcycle club formed a guard for Jim Boss of the Center Street Saloon, dressed as ex-president Richard Nixon. The motorcyclists won the "mystery float" award.

And, last but not least, went the prize for the cutest float to, alas, an unidentified little girl, about 9-years-old, with a carriage decorated to the nines. There's an award waiting for her at the Rutland Recreation Department offices.

Halloween means the annual parade in Rutland, and this year hundreds of residents turned out for the 22nd edition. These muslin ghosts, one of them perched on a fire hydrant, took part, as did dozens of others. About 30 floats were entered. Story on page 6.

Wilson Paces Raiders Past

OAKLAND (UPI) — If Sunday's game is an indication of what Marc Wilson can do, it may be a long time before Jim Plunkett, last season's Super Bowl hero, regains his job as the Oakland Raiders No. 1 quarterback.

Wilson, starting for the third straight game in place of Plunkett, completed 22-of-36 passes for 275 yards, including a clutch 14-yard touchdown throw to Cliff Branch, in leading the Raiders to a 27-17 victory over the New England Patriots.

It was only Oakland's fourth victory against five losses, but as Raider Managing General Partner Al Davis said, "At least we're still alive."

"It's a start," added Coach Tom Flores, "something we needed to get off on the right track. But we're still not out of the hole we dug ourselves into."

Wilson's scoring strike to Branch put the Raiders in front 20-17 with 7:59 left to play, and the Raiders went on to score an insurance TD on a 9-yard run with a recovered fumble by defensive end Willie Jones. The Patriots suffered their seventh loss in nine games.

Pats Coach Ron Erhardt said Wilson's ability to avoid sacks when he was pinned in made a big difference.

"We had a chance to sack him several times," Erhardt said. "But he got away and made some great first downs that kept their offense going."

Kenny King ran for more than 100 yards, the first time it has been done this year by a Raider, to help set up three scores as the Raiders won their fourth game against five losses and dropped the Patriots to 2-7.

Mark Van Eeghen, making his first appearance at running back since suffering an injury five games ago, scored on a 3-yard run, and Chris Bahr kicked field goals of 51 and 26 yards to account for the other Raider points.

The Patriots scored their points on a 19-yard pass from Steve Grogan to Don Hasselbeck, a 1-yard smash by Sam Cunningham and a 38-yard field goal by John Smith.

Cedrick Hardman, Oakland's other defensive end, sacked quarterback Steve Grogan, and when the ball popped out of his hands, Jones grabbed it and ran in for the touchdown with 1:22 remaining.

On Oakland's next possession King fumbled at the 25, and after Rod Shoate recovered for the Pats, Smith kicked a 38-yard field goal to tie the score 3-3.

Midway through the second quarter the Raiders went 57 yards in five plays with van Eeghen covering the final 3 for a 10-3 lead, but with 51 seconds left before the intermission Grogan hit on five consecutive passes for 75 yards, the last one going to Hasselbeck to tie the score 10-10.

Kansas City also scored on a 2-yard run by J. Hadnot in the first period, a 2-yard reception by Jackson in the third period, and a 21-yard field goal by Lowery in the final period.

Halloween: The Two Faces of Rutland

Parade Date Is Debated

Busy Nights for Violence

By MEGAN PRICE

Marilyn Candlish thinks the city could double its attendance at the city's annual Halloween parade if it was staged the night before trick-or-treaters traditionally take to the streets.

"I know a lot of parents would like to come to it. But they won't because they have to stay home and give out candy," she said of the current scheduling.

Others she said "are afraid to leave their house for the evening," because they think their unattended homes would be a target for vandals, she said.

The Rutland Halloween Parade is a traditional event in the state's second largest city. It was started 22 years ago and has been featured in several comic books.

An art teacher at Mill River Union High School in Clarendon, Candlish and her students have spent many hours constructing floats for the parade during the past five years.

Some students who work on the floats every year are also unable to witness the fruits of their labor.

"They have to take their little brothers or sisters out trick-or-treating or their parents are unable to give them a ride.

"I think you'd get twice as many people if it were held another night."

John W. Cioffredi, superintendent of the Recreation Department, said his office has "tried it both ways."

"We used to have it on Halloween and then we were asked to change it and we did," Cioffredi said.

The result, Cioffredi said, was a double haul for greedy kids and a headache for adults who spent two nights answering door bells rung by goblins and ghosts.

"People would call up and ask, 'Which night is Halloween? Which night should we go trick-or-treating? The night of the parade or the next day, Halloween?' There was a lot of confusion."

And by staging the parade a day before the calendar date, "You're asking people to dress up twice."

Some have a difficult time making such a commitment, he said.

But Candlish believes the added participation of children from outlying towns would be worth the hassles.

"It's hard for the rural kids. I know I could get twice the number of kids if it were held on a school night, the day before Halloween," she said.

Candlish said that city recreation department officials are well aware of her view on the subject.

"Every year I plead with them to think of these rural kids," she said. "For some of them it's the only big thing in they've done in their lives."

"It hurts the custodians and the bus drivers too. They're hard to get on a weekend. If it was a school night it would be a lot easier."

"If you really want schools to get involved you should have it on a school night."

Marsha Wilson serves as Program

Supervisor for the Recreation Department.

She said the original intent of the parade was to "give kids something to do" that would in fact help prevent vandalism and keep them out of trouble.

That is the reason it is held on Halloween night, she said.

To hold it on any other night would defeat the purpose.

Candlish thinks the parade should be more than a diversion. It should be a celebration people all over the county could attend.

Cioffredi said a solution "may be to take a poll and see what people think."

But even that is unlikely to make everyone happy, he noted.

were "quietly hostile," one reporter at the scene said.

At the hospital, the hospital security officer and one city officer threatened to throw a reporter in jail for attempting to take a picture of the shot officer as he was driven into the emergency room garage.

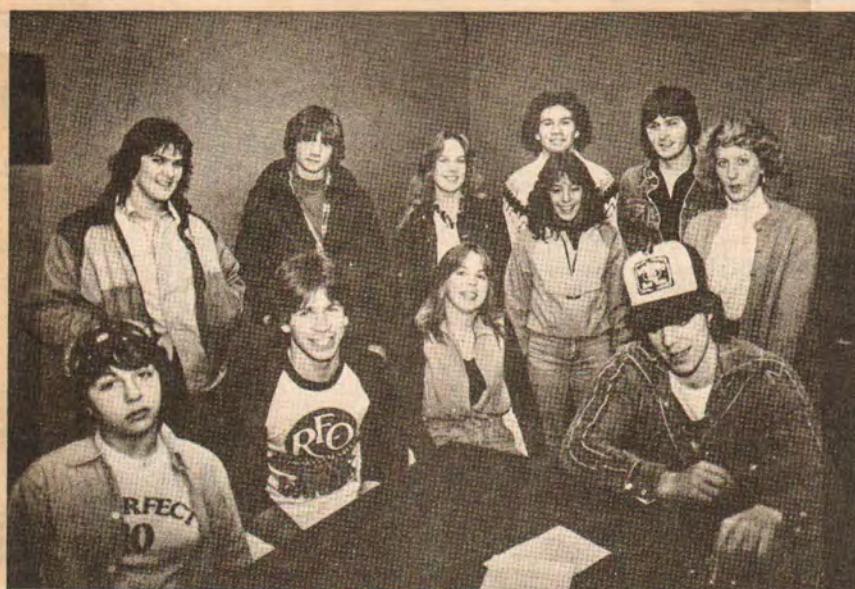

Police were more receptive at the barracks, although the man accused in the shooting showed his disdain for the night's events by spitting on a reporter who took his picture.

Meanwhile, police barely had enough time to catch their breath after the shooting when a call came in shortly after 9:30 p.m. that a game warden was in pursuit of a car with men suspected of attempting to break into the Agway store on Strong's Avenue.

City police jumped into the chase, which ended minutes later when the car ran a stop sign and collided with a city cruiser at the intersection of Prospect Street and Washington Street.

Moments later, four city cruisers and a state cruiser were on the scene, as three men were taken out of the car, handcuffed and led away in front of a

'Street Kids'

These are the Street Kids, a group of about 20 Rutland youths who want to open their own recreation center. Their plan is for a kid-run center where craft classes, cooking and rap sessions can take place. Street Kids are currently raising money and looking for a place for their center.

City 'Street Kids' Look for Alternative

By YVONNE DALEY

They call themselves the "Street Kids" and their goal is to get kids off the street.

Comprised of about 20 teenagers, Street Kids want to establish a recreation center as an alternative to the city's recreation facility.

"A lot of kids don't go to the city recreation center," said Dave Ridlon, 16, "because equipment there is getting old and falling apart and many of the activities don't appeal to older kids."

While the plan is undeniably long shot, these kids have faith. Their

"We want a place that's ours. Ours in making, ours in running," said Dashie Ridlon, 15. "We want to design the place, paint it, make furniture. We'll be learning by doing."

"We want to get kids off the streets. There are too many kids who have nothing to do with their spare time and get into trouble, more because they're bored, than because they want to hurt anyone," added Jennifer Lynch, 16.

While the plan is undeniably long shot, these kids have faith. Their center, they say, will always have adult supervision, but the rules will be made by the children who use the center. No drinking or drug use allowed.

In fact, what they want is "a second home" — a place to play, relax, cook, sew clothes, hold "rap" sessions, and have dinner or birthday parties. The teens plan to have music, pool and ping-pong tables, craft classes and a variety of other activities.

(See Page 19: Street)

Street

The Street Kids have raised more than $500 in a few short months, through bake sales, bottle drives and other projects. Currently, they are raffling off U.S. Savings Bonds.

Ideally, the kids are hoping that "someone like the city would just give us a place that's not being used." In lieu of that, said Dashie Ridlon, "we'll probably end up renting a downtown office or basement."

"Any age kids can come, as long as they abide by the rules," said Lynch. "We don't want any one else telling us how to run the place. So we know we have to come up with good rules and enforce them. It'll be simple: if you don't abide by our rules, OUT."

"The City of Rutland is for adults," Lynch continued. "No wonder so many kids get into drinking problems. Look around: everywhere you go, there's a bar. Anything you want to do in this town — outside of organized sports or joining a club — takes money. Pinball's expensive, even."

A kitchen is high on the list of what the kids want access to at their center. "We want to cook. Most of us can't at home. Can't entertain, anyhow. We're thinking of a place where we can do special things for our friends," said Lynch.

The group wants to charter buses for concerts. "We always want to go to concerts and find ourselves without a way to get there," said Dashie Ridlon.

Street Kids are looking for new members, advice and counseling. They said they welcome information and ideas from anyone in the community.

"Don't forget volunteers and money. We never have enough of either," said Dashie Ridlon.

Those interested should call 775-7495. Ask for Tom.

Evselin Plans Rutland Meet

Vermont Transportation Secretary Tom Evselin will speak to Rutland County Democrats Tuesday night.

Evselin has been invited to discuss county and state issues that come under his agency's jurisdiction.

He is expected to talk about the prospects for new highway construction in the Rutland area. In addition, he will touch on proposals to generate more money for the state Highway Fund.

Evselin, founder of a computer software firm in Montpelier, Solutions Inc., was picked last February by Gov. Richard A. Snelling to head the Agency of Transportation.

Evselin was a Republican candidate for the U.S. Senate in 1980. He was defeated in the primary.

Although the meeting is sponsored by the county Democratic Party, it is open to the public.

The meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. at the Lawrence Recreation Center on West Street.

RUTLAND — While most of Rutland's youths celebrate not having to go to school on Saturdays by frolicking around, dozens of area children head for the Lawrence Recreation Center to participate in a variety of programs, including an arts and crafts program.

The arts and crafts program begins at 10 a.m., runs for two hours and lasts for 10 weeks. It is divided into two groups: a kindergarten-to-third-grade group and a Grades 4-6 class. Karon McGuri teaches the younger children while Mary Lou Kapitan instructs the older group.

Saltis Dairy Flag Champs

Saltis Dairy won its second straight Rutland Recreation Adult Flag Football League title at Rutland High field Sunday morning, defeating 7-Up in the finals by a score of 34-24.

First-period interceptions by Rocky Saltis, Kevin Brough and Brian Traverse led to three quick touchdowns for the Poultey team, as Saltis quarterback Jeff Houghton passed to Bob Scott for two scores and Mike Worthen for another.

7-Up, which lost its fourth final in the past five years, came back in the second quarter on quarterback Bob Bove's short run and two Bove touchdown tosses, to Ed Seager and Dan Seager.

Brough's second interception led to a Houghton touchdown run early in the second half, and another Houghton scamper offset 7-Up's nifty 60-yard screen pass play from Bove to Ed Seager.

Outstanding for Saltis were Houghton, Scott, Saltis, Russ Traverse and Frank Farynairz. Mel Lawson, Bill Dudley, John Miles and Mike Popovitch shined for 7-Up.

Saltis reached the finals by stopping Mother's last week in overtime. 7-Up beat K.C.'s in the other semifinal.

Flag league commissioner Ed Carroll made the trophy presentation to Saltis Dairy after the contest.

Cheerleading Clinic Set

The Rutland Recreation Department is sponsoring a cheerleading clinic on Friday, Nov. 20, from 3:30-5 p.m. at the Lawrence Recreation Center for sixth-grade girls interested in cheering for the fifth and sixth-grade elementary basketball program.

City Softball Fields Too Tiny for Needs

11-23
(First in a Three-Part Series)

By PATRICK HUSSEY

For a city that is the second largest in the state, and one that boasts 45 teams for men and another 14 for women in the city softball league, Rutland doesn't have much to brag about in the way of facilities.

Of the four fields that are used in the city league — Rotary, Meadow Street, North and South and Northeast School — not one is of regulation size. While many other towns of much smaller proportions such as Arlington, Bristol, Springfield and Brattleboro have excellent, regulation-size facilities, Rutland offers only mediocre, non-regulation fields.

It's quite a dilemma for a city with over 600 people actively participating in the league, and another 400 in fan following.

This beef over facilities has been stewing in the pot of obscurity for the last few years, but an incident in late August has spurred some interest in rectifying the situation. The boiling point was reached when the B&M Bombers and General Electric had to postpone playing their Division C softball championship game when a drainage ditch was dug through the outfield at Rotary on the eve of their scheduled game. The ditch was later filled in and the teams played, but players objected to not being informed beforehand.

It seems the conditions at Rotary Field have often been the topic of softball criticism in the area. The drainage problems, the dangerous outfield fence, the roughness of the outfield turf and the short basepaths are all major complaints of the people who have played there.

The field has been done and redone, but its condition has not improved dramatically. The main effect of all the work just seems to be more complaints.

"There are enough good engineers in Rutland that one of them ought to realize that Rotary will never be a good softball field," states Frannie Renner, a 20-year participant in the city league.

"It's just a wet hole... A swamp. Those who know anything about wet land know it will always be wet. Rotary has been nothing but a waste of money."

If indeed the large amounts of dollars sunk into Rotary over the last few years have been wasted, it represents more than $52,000 gone down the drain.

According to Recreation Department Superintendent John Ciofreddi, the original excavation at Rotary was done about three years ago by a firm called Nesco. Before the work was completed, however, Nesco went bankrupt. When city officials still found problems with the grass and slope of the field, they had no choice except to bring in another contractor to finish the job. The city then paid PAK to rectify those two problems.

Not included in the original $52,000 earmarked for Rotary improvements is money spent this summer for drainage work the Giancola Company did at the field. Ciofreddi did not have the figures for that job.

Although some observers are under the impression there is still work to be done on the field, Ciofreddi says all the work has been completed.

According to the people who play there, however, the problems still exist.

Renner, who sponsors a team from Lindholm Sports, feels that Rotary may be better suited for women because of its short outfield. (Currently, both men and women play there.) A ditch that disposes of the excess water borders the outside of the fence at Rotary. The fence is back as far as the water problem will allow, but that does not meet regulation size.

Northeast School has also been used by the city, but it, too, lacks regulation size dimensions. Ciofreddi says that all the other elementary schools have been eliminated as possible sites because of the lack of acreage. Northeast has the most space, but it still is not enough.

The largest field in the city league used to be located at Meadow St., but for the sake of larger participation, it has been split into two smaller, non-regulation size complexes with overlapping outfields.

The fields are now so small, center-fielders at the two Meadow St. sites could possibly stare each other in the face, depending on the power of the hitting.

If the city had installed lights at the original field instead of splitting it, Renner claims Meadow St. would have been a better field and served more people. "Then they could play three games a night there instead of just two," he says. To back up that claim, Renner said that a league in Middlebury plays four games a night on just one lighted field with no serious problems.

But Ciofreddi said that lights there might draw complaints from the neighbors in the residential section surrounding the Meadow St. playground. The late games could mean excessive cheering, says Ciofreddi, which could be too boisterous for some of the neighbors in the area.

Ideally, what the city needs is a softball facility that is separated from the residential sections of the city, is of regulation size and is well-equipped with proper lighting.

Even Ciofreddi himself admits that there is a great softball fad sweeping the country. But he is afraid that the softball craze may just be a temporary thing. He contends softball popularity could decrease in the coming years and then these new fields would lie idle.

Ciofreddi says the only thing wrong with Rutland's softball fields is that they are not ASA (American Softball Association) sanctioned. The fences and basepaths do not meet ASA standards. That means that Rutland cannot hold official ASA tournaments. Ciofreddi also feels the fields are very adequate for the city league.

But that feeling is in apparent, direct contrast to those who want to see some changes. Will Patten of Murphy's, who sponsors four teams in the city league, sees the ASA tournaments as an economical plus for Rutland.

"If we held a state tournament here, it could bring upwards of around $50,000 into the city in just one weekend. When you figure restaurants, hotels and partying money for each individual, it would probably cost about $100 per man for the weekend."

Figuring 500 participants in the tournament, Patten says the $50,000 is a minimum figure. It could go as high as $75-100,000 depending on how many friends and relatives accompany the players.

This raises the question of whether it would indeed be worth sinking money into the creation of some ASA regulation fields.

(Tomorrow, a look at the economics of the city softball league.)

City Softball: Is The Answer More Money?

(Second in A Three-Part Series)

By PATRICK HUSSEY

If Rutland were to consider upgrading its softball facilities, the bottom line in achieving that goal is money. In order to purchase a new field, or if an existing complex were to undergo major renovations, then a large amount of money would have to be raised.

It is possible to raise that kind of money, but major adjustments would have to be made in the softball budget.

As the system stands now, the 45 men's teams are charged a minimum fee of $204 each, and the 14 women's teams are assessed $185 each.

Many of the players and sponsors feel the current fees are a bargain. Frannie Renner, who sponsors a Lindholm Sports team, says, "It's not expensive at all when you consider that bowlers go out and spend $5 a night. Now, if everyone on the softball teams paid $5 a night, that would be $50 from every team for just one night."

"Considering we pay $204 for an entire season, it's really not expensive at all when you look at the amount of games we play."

The league can currently accommodate 60 teams. With the 59 clubs that participated this past year, a total of $12,382 was raised in entry fees. The bulk of this money goes for softballs and umpiring.

According to Recreation Department Superintendent John Ciofreddi, the city kicks in another $4,000 to the league. That amount covers the cost of electricity for the lights at Rotary, lime and bases. Not included in that amount, says Ciofreddi, is gas for mowing the fields, all maintenance and repair work, equipment and supplies, administration costs and the salaries of the maintenance men.

Umpiring costs $9 a game per official, with two officials being assigned to each game. Each of the 51 teams plays a 14 league game schedule, followed by the playoffs. A new softball is used for every game, with a dozen running between $40 and $45.

League Commissioner Richard Alberti is also paid $60 per week for his services. Alberti, who says he sometimes puts in more than 40 hours a week, is primarily in charge of all scheduling.

Will Patten of Murphy's, one of the leading sponsors (four) of teams in the league, suggested that extra money could be raised to fund the league by taxing each player $5 a man for the season. That would provide an extra $50-$75 dollars a team times 59 teams.

Brownie Towle, a member of the Executive Softball Committee in Brattleboro, stated that in his opinion, a player tax is the best route for raising money quickly and easily. He said that Brattleboro's softball complex which many consider one of the best fields in the state was completely renovated through the income raised by the player tax. In Brattleboro's case, the tax was $100,000.

City Softball Solution: Land, Organization, Lots of Money

(Last in A Three-Part Series)

By PATRICK HUSSEY

According to those who have studied in some detail the problem of locating a new site for a bigger softball facility in Rutland, there is one major roadblock holding up the project. It seems the number of possibilities is slim.

In fact, thus far, only three alternatives to the status quo have been mentioned. The first idea was to do away with the two fields at Meadow, converting the complex into one regulation-size field, complete with the use of the league, Fenton said no, he was looking to sell the property outright.

The city has already considered buying Fenton's property as the site for a Resource Recovery Plant, a project headed by the Rutland County Solid Waste District. The RCSWD wants to use the land for an energy plant that would generate steam by burning garbage. The ultimate site for that project, however, has still not been finalized.

Renner and other softball players have suggested that the city should consider buying the land for the softball league.

Fenton's property would appear to be an ideal site for athletic usage. It has a good base of sand below the topsoil which provides excellent drainage. According to people who have played there, the land drains as well as the T&T field in Proctor, one of the most playable fields in the area.

But the excellent drainage is not the only asset of the GE field. The site offers an abundance of playing space; it is located on a major thoroughfare; there is ample parking space available, and it is well away from any residential settings.

Those three alternatives would appear to be the only options available within the city limits. Renner suggests, if worse comes to worse, the league may have to go outside the city to find a workable site. That option, however, would seem an undesirable solution from the standpoint of the city.

Softball has the highest participation of all the recreation programs offered by the city. That, in itself, would seem to warrant providing the best possible facilities the city has available.

Ciofreddi has said that as an individual, he is dwarfed by this kind of project. He hastens to add, however, that he is willing to sit down with a committee or representative group of softball players to study the problem.

As Rutland's recreation director, Ciofreddi says he is open to suggestions for any improvements that could be made to the current field situation in the city, and willing to help carry them out. But Ciofreddi cautions the league that any federal assistance it might look for to carry out any project, may be out of the picture for this coming year.

Rutland has made out very well in past years in obtaining federal money to support this type of project. Much of it came funneled to the city through the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation (BOR). But with budget-cutting fever sweeping Washington this year, Congress did not allocate any money into this program for fiscal year 1982. According to Ciofreddi, the only hope for federal assistance for any new recreation projects is well down the road. In the meantime, the only course for the city, says Ciofreddi, is to fill out an application for fiscal year 1983, and pray that Congress appropriates some money back into the fund. But there are no guarantees.

Brownie Towle, one of the persons behind the move to upgrade Brattleboro's fields, said the improved facilities in that city have sparked an increase in softball enthusiasm throughout the area.

Richard Macko, who assisted Towle in the Brattleboro renovation project, confirmed that Brattleboro's initial hosting of the state tournament last summer was a complete success, both on the field and at the gate.

Towle said that by holding the state tournament, and selling spectator tickets for $1 a day, Brattleboro raised over $1,500 in ticket sales alone. That left them with a $700-$800 profit after expenses, which included paying off scorekeepers and such. The league also held a raffle during the tournament which raised upwards of $700, bringing the net profit to the league for the state tourney of over $1,500.

According to Towle, all it takes is one person to get the ball rolling. As soon as the fundraising ideas begin pouring in and are initiated, a positive cycle begins. If the money is there, the reasons for spending it are sure to follow.

What has to happen to correct the field situation in Rutland, as Ciofreddi lights. The residential neighborhood surrounding this field, and lack of parking are drawbacks here.

Another option, which has met with the most opposition, is sinking more money into the complex at Rotary. Will Patten, of Murphy's, one of the league's biggest sponsors, feels that the Rotary field can still be improved. But many others, like Frannie Renner, a 20-year league participant, are discouraged over the large amounts of money already spent there. They feel spending more money there is not the answer since the field will never be suitable because of the wetness of the surrounding land.

The only other viable option, an alternative originally put forth by league commissioner Richard Alberti, is developing a whole new complex at the site near the old General Electric plant on West Street. Of the three possibilities, this latter holds the most promise. But there are also a number of snags.

The city league has already used the site for free twice in the summers of '79 and '80 when Rotary was undergoing repair. The property is currently owned by Jack Fenton. Contacted and asked if he would be willing to lease the land to the city for di suggested, is to form a committee to study the project, and come up with some viable options.

Renner points to the job the Rutland Amateur Hockey Association (RAHA) did in developing its hockey complex.

The city softball league would do well to follow their standards. All it takes now is some organization and a lot of motivation by concerned softball members.

Cioffredi: Recreation's Point Man

"If we didn't have any problems, we wouldn't need you," Former alderman Craigue S. Perkins to John Cioffredi.

By BOB DRZEWCZEWSKI

The doors to recreation superintendent John Cioffredi's office are among the largest in the city.

It can be argued that the imposing doors are needed to handle the huge influx of complaint-bearing traffic that passes through those huge openings.

Since he assumed office more than 21 years ago, Cioffredi has been besieged by torrents of criticism ranging from a lack of facilities to nepotism to overcrowded tennis courts to leaky swimming pools to empire building to excessive fees to over-delegating authority.

"Everybody — especially the complainers — tell me that they wouldn't want my job for all the tea in China," Cioffredi said. "As a public servant, I've come to accept criticism as part of the job. I'd be lying if I said that it wasn't tough, especially when you know that you're doing the best you can with the facilities you have."

"One of the problems is that everyone is acting in his own interests. The softball players don't care what the tennis players want and the tennis players don't care what the softball players want. Most of them don't know that we have to be concerned with the overall operation.

"Everybody expects you to be totally perfect when you have to work with what you have. Our goal is to offer everyone an opportunity to participate and to enact policies that are best for a majority of the people."

One of the more trying moments of the Cioffredi administration was a few years ago when he was accused of nepotism for hiring his college-age children as city employees.

"I really didn't have a hand in their hiring," Cioffredi said. "They were hired because of their ability, not because they were related to me. After it was over, people complimented me on the job they had done."

In recent years, there has been some clamor over the fact the Recreation Department has been charging participants.

"The day of the giveaway is gone," Cioffredi said. "Some people realize this and are willing to pay. Others don't."

"You get Will Patten and some other guys who say, 'If it costs more, we'll pay whatever it costs.' Then, you get the squeaky wheel."

Cioffredi readily admits that he has acquired "ulcers and high blood pressure" as a result of the pressure of his job.

"I'm pretty excitable," Cioffredi said. "I have always been emotional and can't keep quiet. I guess I'm not a Tom Landry type. You know how us Latins can be."

When not on the job, Cioffredi uses running, golf and officiating basketball and football games as outlets to release any pent-up energy.

"Outside of my family, my two passions are running and golf," Cioffredi said. "I use officiating as an outlet. It might sound strange, but that gets my mind off work because I have to concentrate so much on the game I'm officiating."

When Cioffredi arrived in Rutland on June 6, 1960, after working with the huge Westchester County Recreation Dept., the city had virtually no programs or facilities. His first office was in City Hall.

"At first we had to establish programs because there were none," Cioffredi said. "That's probably why we're still program-oriented here."

Perhaps the best measure of the growth of the department in the last 21 years is achieved by comparing budgets. The fiscal budget for the year 1960-61 was $58,959.20, while the current budget is $347,666.79.

Cioffredi credits most of the growth of the department to his ability to obtain federal funds for constructing recreation facilities. The recreation director said that he raised $1,017,348 in federal grants, mostly during the administration of former mayor Gilbert G. Godnick.

"I wrote the grants for the BOR (Bureau of Outdoor Recreation) projects that came into the city," Cioffredi said.

During his administration the city has added two outdoor handball courts, two inside handball courts, the Lawrence Recreation Center, three softball fields, two Little League fields, a baseball diamond, seven basketball courts, 12 tennis courts, two platform tennis courts, an Olympic-size swimming pool, two wading pools, two children's mini-parks and the skating rink at Giorgetti Park.

In the past 21 years, the department has grown from a one-man office to a four-person office with several part-time employees and a three-man maintenance crew.

The expansion has caused its share of growing pains and ensuing criticism. Cioffredi has been accused of being an empire builder by some and criticized for delegating too much authority by others.

"For years, I was a one-man office and all the responsibility rested on my shoulders," Cioffredi said. "Then I was able to develop competent people to form a staff and act as program supervisors.

"I think that delegating authority provides better service for the community. The supervisors report to me so that I can check out the programs and be aware of what is happening. I wouldn't be able to do this if I didn't have a fine staff."

Much of Cioffredi's time is spent dealing with maintenance problems and work. In addition to the recreation center and various city fields, Cioffredi is responsible for all city parks (which include all traffic islands in Rutland).

"I spend most of my time with maintenance programs," Cioffredi said. "If it wasn't for this, I'd have more time to devote to other things."

"I do enjoy being out though. It gives me time to see the facilities. There's nothing I like more than seeing the facilities used. I get quite a thrill in the winter when I see people shoveling off the basketball courts at Rotary so that they can play."

Recreation has undergone wholesale changes since Cioffredi assumed office in 1960. He feels that the major change has been widespread adult participation.

Cioffredi feels that the largest age block that participates in department activities is the 25-35 year-old group.

"It is this age group that our biggest demand comes from," Cioffredi said. "When we first started, if we satisfied the needs of the kids, people felt that we were doing a good job. Now adults are looking inwards to their municipalities to provide recreational facilities for their leisure time."

"These 25-35-year-old people really want to participate. They participate in just about everything, softball, flag football, volleyball, everything. I don't know what their reasons are — whether they just want to stay in shape, whether it's a social thing or whatever. But this seems to be our biggest group."

A sport in which the 25-35 age group is highly visible is volleyball. It is also the sport which is causing the most headaches right now. Volleyball currently is one of the fastest growing sports in the area, but Cioffredi said that its sudden growth has caused a few problems at the Recreation Center.

"Volleyball has really mushroomed (once again, primarily within the 25-35 age group) in men's, women's and co-ed. We have a bit of a problem finding time for them to play and practice outside of league play. The players say that they have every right to play just like the basketball players."

"The problem is that we are using a facility that was wasn't designed as a recreation center."

According to Cioffredi, the top priority for the city is to construct a "new, more flexible community center to better address the needs of the community."

"The lack of gyms is more critical than anything else," Cioffredi continued. "Other things that we could use is an amphitheater at Pine Hill, a course for motorbikes and snowmobiles and a physical fitness course. If what the people want is a major-league type softball facility, we'll look into that too."

"The city doesn't need a new swimming pool."

Today, Cioffredi admits that 21 years on the job has given him "ulcers and high blood pressure." "I'm pretty excitable," he says. "I have always been emotional and can't keep quiet. I guess I'm not a Tom Landry type. You know how us Latins can be."

Santa's Making Telephone Calls to City Children

By MEGAN PRICE
With the rising cost of the sending a letter to Santa, the merry old soul has taken to phoning his young friends — at least in Rutland City.

With the aid of the Lawrence Recreation Center, Santa Claus called more than 30 children recently from what his small friends believe to be the ageless elf's North Pole toy shop.

It's a cooperative effort between Santa and personnel at the Lawrence Recreation Center that has become a seasonal tradition over the past several years.

Rutland Postmaster Kenneth Yates said he has noticed the difference.

The crush of envelopes addressed to Santa has diminished over the past few years.

"We used to get hundreds of them," Yates said. "But we don't anymore."

Yates attributed the lull to businessmen and civic organizations' organized attempts to get children to write to Santa.

Some groups advertise that for the cost of return postage or a little more, children who write to Santa will receive an "official" reply from the famous gift giver.

This ensures that children whose scrawled notes to Santa are dropped in mail slots across the country will in fact receive a return letter from the jolly fat man.

So instead of letters addressed to "Santa Claus, North Pole," these letters have a real street address that make them deliverable for mortal postal workers.

But there are still a few letters that come anyway, addressed simply in scrawling pencil or crayon to "Santa."

Yates forwards these to the Lawrence Recreation Center, where Santa — in the form of Director John Cioffredi and Program Director Marsha Wilson — take over.

They send children an official Santa-approved letter with a letterhead which features Santa at the North Pole.

Wilson said things have fallen off considerably in this letter campaign.

Years ago, the recreation department encouraged parents and teachers to urge children to write to Santa. And the letters were forwarded to the crest of the Center Street hill.

"We used to get hundreds and hundreds," she said. But Monday, just three days before Christmas Wilson said, "We've received only two. But any letter we get, we answer."

Wilson said Santa's phone calls have gone over quite well in the past few years.

Parents come in and fill out a form asking specific questions about their offspring.

The child's age, names of brothers and sisters and pets, toys that they have said they want all are requested.

Wilson serves as the operator for the call. She dials the number and tells the child on the other end, "You have a call from the North Pole."

The "Santa" gets on the line and the children are amazed by how much the merry old soul knows about them and their family.

Frank Pelkey of Curtis Avenue and Philip Killoran of Pittsford became Santa Claus for about 40 area children this year.

"I've done this for the last three years," Pelkey said of his Santa persona.

"We get a good response from the three to five-year-old group," Pelkey said. The Rutland resident spoke with about 20 children this year.

"One of the children promised that if I stopped by around 10 p.m. he'd have cookies and hot chocolate for me," he said.

Killoran said he had an older brother who tried to get in on the line first and the younger one cried."

As for the Santa- associated "Ho Ho Ho," Killoran said, "I didn't ho ho too much. I think that's probably been overdone a little bit."

Pelkey said he was thrown off his usual Santa Claus monologue when a child asked if he could speak with Mrs. Santa and Rudolph.

The quick-thinking Pelkey told the youngster, "Mrs. Claus was out and Rudolph was having supper."

Generally, Pelkey found that "girls still want dolls for Christmas and boys want those electronic games."

But he said the difference in the sexes may be diminishing. Both boys and girls wanted toys associated with the Dukes of Hazzard television series, he said.

The Rutland Aldermen — A Score Card

By PAUL TEETOR

RUTLAND — In Rutland, everyone complains about the board of aldermen, but no one does anything about it.

The latest illustration of this sorry state of affairs is the ice cold contest for the five aldermanic seats up for election March 2, Town Meeting Day.

As of late Saturday night, one alderman, board President Walter M. Moore, had announced his intention to vacate his seat, while only Alderman Nicholas A. Barone has indicated he will definitely run again.

The other three aldermen whose seats are up for re-election, Shirley D. Smith, Hayden S. Bride, and John McDonough, have hemmed and hawed and refrained from making a firm commitment one way or the other.

Meanwhile, only local theater king Kevin Mullin, 22, and former two-term alderman gadfly Terrance "Terry" Barrett, 55, have announced their candidacy and begun active campaigning for the election that is less than four weeks away.

City Clerk John Barrett, who has been handling these things since 1961, was hard-pressed recently to recall an aldermanic election that generated as little heat, or light, as the present one.

"I'm hoping there will be a last-minute flood of candidates," Barrett said Friday, "but I'm not too optimistic."

The problem of getting candidates to run is highlighted by the experiences of former board President William J. Bloomer.

Bloomer became extremely frustrated with the board's chaotic performances, and at the end of his term he announced he wouldn't run again. It wasn't the structure of the board that was to blame, but its "cast of characters," he said.

Following is a rundown on those "characters" and their past performances:

Robert S. Stafford — Stafford, 68, is retired and seemingly devotes all his time to the city. A man of basic common sense, Stafford has a great deal of trouble with public speaking and often hurts his cause with his inarticulateness. Stafford is willing to do the spade work, the thankless tasks that have to be done. He has worked long and hard with the Rutland County Solid Waste District. A follower, not a leader.

Ethel Wing Stearns — The grand old lady of Rutland, Stearns, 81, rarely fails to preface any remark at a board meeting with the statement, "I love this city, I live for this city, and I think we should do this." What follows is usually a strong exposition of her point of view of the subject at hand; and, while one may not always agree with her, there can be no mistaking where she stands. Usually, May she enjoy her last 13 months as an alderman.

John McDonough — The last angry man. McDonough's most characteristic pose finds him lost in contemplation for long periods of time, seemingly oblivious to the turmoil around him, when suddenly, in the midst of some obscure point being made by another alderman, he will forcefully wheel his chair around and, in a voice of great resonance, call, "Mr. Chairman, point of order," or "I object to the implications of the alderman's statement." Amazed, the fellow alderman usually has to admit that McDonough has a point. McDonough has also been known to pick arguments with those "outside the rail" who, by parliamentary rules, are theoretically unable to respond. At last summer's budget hearings he got into shouting matches with several policemen protesting Police Department cuts, and more recently he has launched verbal attacks on members of the press during board meetings. Is not expected to run for another term.

Hayden S. Bride — Jut-jawed, no-nonsense, doesn't say a whole lot, but when he does you better listen. A good alderman showing signs recently of becoming a very good one. Was the only committee chairman to follow the board's own directive last summer to cut their particular budgets 5 percent, putting the city's recreation budget under severe strain. Appointed by Godnick to fill out Barrett's term when he left for Arizona in early 1980, Bride, a janitorial supervisor in the city's school system, won his own two-year term in March 1980. A follower struggling to make the transition to being a leader.

Howard H. Shortsleeve — Assertive, articulate, persuasive, spokesman for commercial and industrial interests in the city. Has been known to tell Alderman Linda M. Welch to "shut up" during board meetings when he did not like her ideas. Led the drive to cut 5 percent from Daley's budget last summer, ignoring protests from Moore and others that cuts being made, such as those in the Department of Public Works, were pointless because they would have to be restored in the winter and spring. Most recently led the drive to have the city give the Downtown Development Corp. $50,000 to capitalize a federal low-interest loan program designed to encourage commercial and industrial development. Also led fight to keep the question of giving the $50,000 to the DDC off the March 2 ballot, telling fellow aldermen, "If you send this to the voters, it will go down the drain. We owe it to ourselves to vote this $50,000 into the budget."

Joseph R. Paul — Less assertive, less articulate, and less persuasive than Shortsleeve, but still for all practical purposes his twin on the board. Paul, who runs a travel agency in the city, started his first term auspiciously last spring by being the only alderman to step forward and call for the resignation of DPW Commissioner Allan Merritt after reading reports of Merritt running two insurance companies out of his city hall office. Soon after he joined with Shortsleeve to grab the headlines by calling for fiscal restraint and demanding that the mayor cut 5 percent from the final budget he submitted to the board. When Daley refused, Paul and Shortsleeve pledged that the board would come up with the 5 percent in cuts. The board finally ended up cutting approximately 3 percent, much of which has since been restored, from the original budget Daley submitted to them. After that burst of leadership Paul just seemed to disappear, rarely speaking at meetings except to make a joke. This he does quite well.

Shirley D. Smith — A teacher in the city's school system, Smith sat and listened like a good student for most of her first term. But in the last six months she has become more familiar with the city government process and the mysterious inner workings of the 11-headed monster known as the board of aldermen. This has given her the opportunity to take the lead in the city's drive to update the grand list with a professional, outside reappraisal. This is a major project, one to which she has devoted countless hours. Like Bride, Smith is a good alderman seemingly on the verge of becoming a very good one, and possibly a leader as well.

Nicholas A. Barone — The maverick. Says what he wants about who he wants wherever he wants. A janitorial supervisor in the city's post office, Barone says he runs an informal polling operation with all the people that come in and out of the post office every day. Seems to be the one alderman, along with Welch, that most citizens call when they have a problem or a complaint. Prides himself on protecting the taxpayer's money from wild schemes. He labeled Shortsleeve's DDC proposal a "$50,000 giveaway," charging that it was intended to help "a few downtown merchants" and did little or nothing for the average citizen. Although this was not always the case, he is dead on unions now, particularly municipal unions.

Linda M. Welch — Deisted by Godnick, former aldermanic strongman Peter Goshgarian and others as a political lightweight when she first came on the board, Welch has shrugged off the criticism and the barbs and the name-calling to emerge as a strong political force in her own right, with an obvious choice of running for the state Senate in November or for the mayoralty a year from March 2. Welch's role on the board was symbolized recently when she said she was "disgusted" by the board's decision to deny the voters a voice in Shortsleeve's $50,000 proposal. She was the only one to vote for her motion to put the $50,000 question to the voters. A conservative Republican, Welch is a strong believer in President Ronald Reagan's "New Federalism," which is attempting to shift the burdens of governing back to state and local government. A strong leader who speaks out and defends the public's right to know, a right most politicians never acknowledge.

David G. Zsido — On the board less than a year, Zsido has made his mark as the most meticulous notetaker and detail man on the board. Stepped forward in December to call for the resignation of Grand Juror John R. Canney at a time when many governmental, legal and police officials were aware of but silent about the same problems that Zsido spoke up about, charging Canney with "a lack of initiative and aggressiveness in doing his job." Canney subsequently resigned. At first many board members assumed that Zsido would automatically vote with Shortsleeve and Paul on important issues, but recently he has gone his own way. Has the reputation of being a real straight arrow, and he recently started the board by calling for much tougher city laws dealing with corrupt campaign practices, charging that there had been repeated violations with little enforcement in the past.

Walter M. Moore — The board president announced his decision Friday not to seek another term after 10 years on the board. Moore led the board in an evenhanded way, but his common sense voice was missed on the important fiscal questions. Like many other aldermen, Moore always makes a point of putting the city's interests first, sometimes to the annoyance of those who are pushing for regional proposals. He will be missed.

Beanie's Big Hundredth

By B.K. MARQUARD

At around this time last century, Florence Beane and former President Franklin D. Roosevelt were born a mere two weeks apart.

Beane's centennial was celebrated with a little less fanfare than FDR's, but then, Florence Beane has gone about her life in a less celebrated manner, content to pass along to all a quiet but determined optimism that hasn't faded in more than 100 years.

A century is an awful long time to be alive, and sometimes Beane — or "Beanie," as she prefers to be called — wonders why she was chosen from among the flock to carry the torch of life past her 100th year.

"I asked my minister once why I'm still alive after all this time," Beane said recently. "He told me: 'Well, it's because the devil doesn't want you and God isn't ready yet.'"

Born Jan. 16, 1882, in Rutland Town on her grandfather Dunklee's farm by Dunklee Pond, Beane was baptized in a local Baptist church 91 years ago, and her views on life at 100 continue to reflect her religious upbringing.

(See Page 24: 100)

100 —

Beane believes that if there is a reason why she's still going strong entering her second century of life, it's because she's always tried to lend a hand to those in need along the way.

Selflessly helping, and a positive outlook on life, may well be the secrets behind this centenarian's longevity.

People are "too unhappy too much of the time," Beane says. "I close my eyes and ears to unhappiness."

Looking back at 100, the trials and tribulations of humanity lose a lot of the urgency attributed to them by those who view such upheavals with considerably less perspective.

Beane was approaching what most consider "middle age" when the Great Depression ravaged the country. Unfazed, Beane dismisses that troubled part of United States history with a smile and a raised eyebrow. "Oh, was there a problem then?"

Several decades hence, Beane lives on, cheerfully as ever in a North Main Street retirement home run by the Rutland Missionary Home Association.

She passes the time reading and, when she's in the mood, playing the piano. According to one of the home's staff members, Beane "plays the piano by ear, beautifully. Those fingers of hers go right up and down the keys."

Sometimes, the staff member said, Beane will be up and about before 7 a.m., coaxing out a rendition of "Let Me Call You Sweetheart," or one of her other favorite songs.

When the weather's nice, it's not at all unusual to see Beane walking the distance from her North Main Street home to the Senior Citizen's Center on Deer Street.

"Walking's good for you," Beane says firmly. "It's good for your lungs and circulation."

While she isn't the city's oldest resident (there's at least one 101-year-old at a local nursing home), Beane certainly may lay claim to being the most spry and the most cheerful.

Or, in her words: "I just try to think happy thoughts, that's all."

Softball Player Tax Voted

Another step in the continuing softball situation was taken Monday night at the Lawrence Recreation Center when the league representatives voted in a five dollar player tax.

Despite the low turnout of representatives (only nine of the 45 sponsors were present), the outcome of the vote is binding. Each team representative will be responsible for collecting the five-dollar fee from his players when the league entry fee is due.

A vote for a ten dollar tax was voted down by a 5-4 margin.

Another softball meeting is scheduled for next Monday, February 15, at 7 p.m. in the back room of the Recreation Center. It is important that each of the team representatives make a point to attend.

A committee will be chosen at this meeting to decide how the money for the city softball league will be spent.

Daytime Softball Anyone?

Because there are some potential softball players in the city who would like to participate in the city league, but can't because of night jobs, interest has been expressed in forming a daytime league.

Rutland Recreation Director John Cioffredi has said that he is willing to assist in running the league.

If there is anyone in the city who would like to form a team to play daytime softball, please either leave a note at the Herald Sports' office or contact Cioffredi at the Recreation Center. If the interest is there, a meeting may be scheduled for sometime in March to organize the league.

Softball Committee Selects Giorgetti Site for New Field

By PATRICK HUSSEY

Although the issue had been laid to rest over the holidays, progress resumed this past Thursday in the study of contracting a regulation softball field in Rutland.

Members of the softball committee appointed by Rutland Recreation Director John Ciuffredi, have finally settled on a course of action. Following Thursday night's meeting at Murphy's, the committee, headed by Will Patten, decided to request the use of the field in the back half of Giorgetti Park.

The area is currently being used by Little League teams. But under the conditions for the use of the field, both softball and Little League could benefit from the proposal.

Even though Ciuffredi has no problems with the move, he hesitates to give his final approval. First, he wants to make sure no toes are being stepped on if the change does occur.

A number of different possibilities could evolve in the creation of new fields. But it looks right now, as long as Little League supporters have no qualms, like softball players will use the Giorgetti Park facility this summer.

The new field will be set up to meet American Softball Association standards. There would be a permanent fence constructed. Lights could be questionable for this summer.

Because baseball is played on the opposite portion of the field, Ciuffredi would like a design drawn up so that both the baseball and softball fields could be lighted. That may take a while because of the money involved.

In order to have two regulation fields, work will be done on Meadow Street South. The basepaths will be re-designed to meet ASA standards.

The other possibility, which at this point looks remote, is filling in the field by White's Playground. The outfield still needs a lot of work to meet ASA qualifications. But spreading light on the issue is the fact that Ciuffredi would love to see the project done. Committee member Frannie Renner is also a big backer of the project.

Ciuffredi would only agree to the project, however, as long as the job would be done all at one time. He doesn't want trucks randomly coming in and out of the area and dumping only when they have the fill. If somebody in the league can promise to bring in enough to fill to complete the job, then Ciuffredi is all for it.

Although the Little League may lose the Giorgetti site, they stand a chance of getting full use of Rotary Field. And if work is done on White's, then the Little League could develop two regulation fields on Meadow Street.

But at least the ball is rolling. The ideas are transforming into action. There will be better softball facilities in Rutland this coming summer, and they only stand to improve with each coming year.

But now is the time for each softball participant to show his individual dedication toward this project. Actions speak louder than words, and the league desperately needs the support. Patten will be meeting with Ciuffredi Monday morning to get a list of representatives from each team in the league.

A meeting is tentatively scheduled for Thursday for these representatives to meet with Patten to discuss the plans being developed. No doubt each team may be facing a hike in entry fees along with a substantial player tax. But the money will be used in the creation of quality facilities.

The ball is rolling, but as it grows larger, it needs more people to help carry the load.

Another uphill battle, of sorts, that was revealed this past week was the decision by authorities at North Country Union High School to try to institute a new playoff division.

North Country basketball coach Jerry Clifford is heading the effort to form a State Division 1-A category for those schools which traditionally encounter losing records in the current Division 1 league. Even when these schools do qualify for post-season play, they are usually eliminated in the first round.

As an example of their dilemma, Clifford pointed to last year's Division 1 playdown pitting his Falcons against South Burlington. The Rebels trounced North Country in that game 95-44.

"Neither school gets anything out of a game like that," claims Clifford. "They (South Burlington) would have been better off to have a practice with themselves."

"We just can't compete with the city teams. The interest is there, but we just don't have the numbers."

Clifford said games of that nature are demeaning to his players. He urges his players to work hard all summer in preparation for the season. Then, when they come back and get blown out it only demoralizes them.

Clifford said that he has contacted seven other schools in the state which suffer from the same problem. They are Middlebury, Missisquoi, Colchester, Mt. Mansfield, Hartford, Milton and Lyndon. Only Milton officials have indicated they might not be in favor of such a change.

A meeting has been scheduled for Jan. 28 at the Charlmont Restaurant in Morrisville to see just how serious these schools are in forming their own playoff league.

Even if the Headmasters do not wish to grant the 1-A league, Clifford would at least like a waiver from the 20-game limit so they can hold a tournament.

Welch Boosts Bride in Race for Aldermanic Gavel

By PAUL TEETOR

The race for the aldermanic presidency, conceded to Alderman Howard H. Shortsleeve as an easy victor over Alderman Linda M. Welch as recently as last week, took a dramatic turn Sunday night when Welch declared that she was supporting Alderman Hayden S. Bride for the post.

And in a move equally dramatic in its own way, the decidedly low-profile Bride reluctantly said he would seek the presidency.

"I would have liked to talk to some of the other aldermen before this happened," Bride said Sunday night in reference to Welch's decision. "But now that Linda has made her decision, yes, I will seek the presidency of the board," he said.

Welch, who is known to be considering either a run for the state senate in November or the mayoralty race next March, said late Sunday night she made her surprise decision because she feels Bride is a widely respected alderman. She added that everyone can support him for board president, rather than someone like herself or Shortsleeve who have both supporters and detractors on the board.

"Everyone knows Hayden is a straight shooter who has no axes to grind and tells you exactly what he thinks," Welch said, "and I think at this critical time for our city we need someone like him to run the board." Bride established his credentials last year when he became the only committee chairman to follow through on the board's self-imposed mandate to cut five percent from Mayor John J. Daley's budget, in the process putting the city's recreation budget under severe strain.

"Hayden was the only alderman who demonstrated fiscal responsibility when the rest of them were only talking about it," City Treasurer Ronald Graves said last month.

The move to cut five percent from Daley's budget was led by Shortsleeve and Alderman Joseph R. Paul.

Welch said the only question in her mind about Bride had been his parliamentary experience. But she said she recently learned that Bride, who doesn't say much at board meetings unless he has a definite point to make, has served as an officer of the Rutland Moose Club for 15 years, conducting meetings with as many as 300 people.

Shortsleeve, a local real estate agent, has made no secret of his plan to revamp the board's priorities. If he becomes president, he has said he would concentrate on community planning and commercial and industrial development while making sure every-day matters that can be handled by the department heads are not bucked up to the aldermen.

"If Howard goes through with what he's suggesting, and brings in some of the ideas from Project 20/20, he could be very effective," Alderman Robert S. Stafford said Sunday night.

Project 20/20 was a regional project organized last summer and fall to chart the Rutland area's course to a prosperous future. It resulted (See Page 20: Aldermen)

New Blood Donors Sought

4/26/82

Under the slogan, "Join the Life Support Team," employees of the City of Rutland are being recruited as new donors at the next Red Cross blood drawing which will be held on Tuesday from noon to 5 p.m. at the Moose Club, 78 Center St.

With Mrs. Meg Grace, assistant city treasurer, serving as coordinator, the special recruiting campaign has been underway the past 10 days among employees at City Hall and the police, fire, recreation and public works departments.

The city employees blood drive is part of the continuing efforts of a special donor-recruiting committee.

headed by Robert Gaiko, personnel manager at Moore Business Forms. "That these promotional efforts are worthwhile in developing this vital community resource," Gaiko said, "is evident from our recent activity among local bank employees. Of 41 bank workers donating March 2, 14 were new donors. We plan to continue our recruiting efforts next month when we will be contacting employees of local insurance companies urging them to donate at the May 25 drawing."

Red Cross officials also urge the public to join Rutland's city workers in donating their blood on Tuesday and have noted to be eligible, donors must be in good health, between the ages of 17 and 66 and weigh at least 110 pounds.

Members of the Women's Auxiliary of the Disabled American Veterans, headed by Mrs. Maxine Clark, will be in charge of the donor-canteen, furnishing a and serving all refreshments to donors and volunteer workers.

RUTLAND TOWN RECREATION

The recent vote of our town regarding recreation, education and the general direction we are taking deserves a second look. Our country at present is in a depressed state economically and the trends throughout our nation are very conservative.

The people in our community, in an attempt to cut costs and hold spending to a minimum, have probably overlooked a very important fact. We cannot afford to deprive our youth of either physical education or mental education. Experts throughout our nation cautiously warn us on a daily basis of the corrosion of our youth. Our young people are having to face and deal with drugs at a very young age — Little League age and younger. We don't want to face the reality that we are fighting and losing a serious battle with many of our youth today.

Where are our priorities? We can allow abortion, sexual perversion to continue, but we can't support recreation for our children.

We cannot stop drugs in our community within reach of our own kids, but we can stop healthy exercise, Little League, and close down our recreation areas to our children.

A family must and should work and play together, but our youth still get exposed to vice and drugs. Parents cannot be with their children every moment and so this community has an obligation to its children. They are our future and they cannot care for themselves and others if we don't show them how to care, how to work together, to help each other in effect to grow with love and understanding.

Have we lost sight of our priorities?

Are we even using common sense?

Are our savings in tax dollars worth it? Look at our children and you decide.

I was a child once and life was so good. I hope our children can say the same. It's up to all of us. Let's organize. In effect, let's start caring.

City Recreation Challenges Area Kids

By VYTO STARINSKAS

The Rutland Parks and Recreation Department is offering area children a challenge: Live up to your potential.

To do this, the department, in addition to its regular summer programs, is offering new "adventure" programs to build self-confidence.

The adventures will include rappelling, caving, rock climbing, camping and overnight bike trips, all at a fraction of the usual cost.

The idea of the new programs is not to be grueling, but to teach the participants to accept and execute challenges, the department's Program Director Marsha Wilson said during an interview Tuesday.

Hopefully, from the programs, youths will learn to meet other challenges in life and overcome them, Wilson said.

Even though classes will be "adventurous," they will also be safe, Wilson stressed.

Take rappelling off Dear Leap cliff at Sherburne Pass, she said. A youth may be hesitant at first, but once he or she is taught by an experienced instructor, the sport can be safe and personally rewarding.

The instructor, as well as the youth, are both attached to safety lines and the youth is guided down the cliff by the instructor, she said.

The youth accomplishes a feat he never thought he could accomplish, Wilson said.

The rock climbing lessons will be given by climbing expert Trip Westcott and will be offered in two, four-day sessions for $10.

Wilson said a Turrell Fund grant will help keep the cost of the programs down. Scholarships are available for the needy, she said.

Crowley Race Featured Family

Jack Arthur will be the first name to surface when people think back to the Fifth Annual Frank Crowley Memorial Road Race held in Rutland this past Sunday.

Arthur took home the first-place trophy in the winning time of 32:10 over the 10-kilometer course.

But there were some other interesting entrants. Three descendants of Frank Crowley ran in Sunday's race. The most notable was nine-year-old Jason Suahn, a great nephew of Frank Crowley and the youngest finisher of the race.

The two other descendants were nieces Carol Reed and Joan Morrissey, who had the distinction of being the last person to cross the finish line.

Softball Rules Adopted

Two new rule adoptions were the main topics when the Rutland Area Softball Association held its bi-monthly meeting Wednesday night at the Rutland Recreation Center.

The first rule to be introduced was a mandatory law stating that all catchers in the softball league must wear face masks. If only one team has a mask, they must share it with the opposing team. If neither team owns a catcher's mask, then the game will be ruled as a double forfeit. The new law is effective starting Monday, June 21.

The second rule bars the use of metal spikes or any other illegal equipment including bats and multi-colored gloves. If metal spikes are discovered by either the umpire or team, the opposing team has the option of accepting or reversing the preceding play prior to the discovery. That also takes effect on Monday.

If anybody wishes to pick up a copy of the league rules, they may do so at either the Recreation Department or Murphy's Restaurant on Center Street.

The next meeting is scheduled for Wednesday, June 30 at 4:45 p.m.

FRIDAY 30 APRIL 1982

Rutland Mayor John Daley signs a proclamation designating the week May 1-8 "National Physical Fitness Week in Rutland." Flanking the mayor (from left) are Marsha Wilson and John Cioffredi of the Rutland Recreation Dept., Allen Sher of the College of St. Joseph the Provider and Ray Sparks. For the week's schedule of events, see Scoreboard.

Walking to Marathons Part of 'Fitness Week'

By BOB DRZEWICZEWSKI

Want an extra 45-minute break this week?

That's right — forty-five minutes.

Any strings attached??

Well...a few...but you'll have fun during those extra 45 minutes — guaranteed.

Several downtown employers, including the city of Rutland and the state of Vermont, have agreed to give their employees an additional 45-minute lunch break to participate in Physical Fitness Week, a statewide program sponsored by the Governor's Council on Physical Fitness.

According to Allen Sher of the College of St. Joseph the Provider, director of the week's program, a number of downtown employers who have been contacted through the Chamber of Commerce's newsletter have agreed to the extended lunch break.

Scheduled activities will range from aerobic dancing to walk sessions to marathon swims.

Activities are planned throughout the week, though the principal offerings are on Monday and Saturday, the final day.

Sher, Marsha Wilson, Charles Ash, Dot Paul, John Cioffredi and Ray Sparks, former standout wrestling coach at Springfield College, are the primary movers and shakers of the program.

The planning committee has designed a program that is varied and within the reach of everyone. The committee has spent long hours promoting the scheduled events.

Though other cities in the state will be commemorating Physical Fitness Week, Rutland clearly has the most complete and varied schedule of events.

Many of the premier events are planned for the noon hour at the Depot Park in downtown Rutland to attract as many participants as possible and to justify the extended lunch hours granted by city employers. All structured events will be conducted by local specialists.

Sher has attracted some of the top "names" in participation sports and physical education in the area, including Linda Crawford, Pat Garafano, Charles and Carol Ash, Hank Bechtel, Susan Ellman, Sparks, Mark Benetatos and Frank Micalizzi.

While most of the planned programs are participation events, a few films and lectures are scheduled. On Tuesday, a "Sports Star" night will be held at the Fox Room of the Rutland Library. At press time, Sher was still trying to attract a "name" pro athlete. He has to date received commitments from Funzie Cioffi, Bob Dikeman and Mike Gallagher, the U.S. Nordic ski team coach.

Some of the activities are scheduled at places (Brookside Tennis and Racquetball and the Vermont Achievement Center pool) which normally charge for use of their facilities. There will be no use charge during the planned events.

The only "catch" to the free use of the VAC pool for the marathon swim is that the number of people who can participate during each two-hour session is limited. Those interested are urged to register in advance at VAC.

In addition to the aforementioned events, various activities (planned and unplanned) will be taking place in elementary schools in Rutland County. Sher said that nearly every school in the area has some special plans for Physical Fitness Week.

Some pre-school children and senior citizens will also participate in the physical fitness week. The senior citizens will be introduced to the 25-mile walking club during the week.
